Preventive Chemotherapy in Human Helminthiasis World Health Organization, 2006 This manual focuses on how and when a set of low cost or free drugs should be used in developing countries to control a set of diseases caused by worm infections Preventive chemotherapy in this context means using drugs that are effective against a broad range of worm infections to simultaneously treat the four most common diseases caused by worms river blindness onchocerciasis elephantiasis lymphatic filariasis schistosomiasis and soil transmitted helminthiasis Significant opportunities also exist to integrate these efforts with the prevention and control of diseases such as trachoma The new approach provides a critical first step in combining treatment regimens for diseases which although different in themselves require common resources and delivery strategies for control or elimination and social ecology data and modelling and fundamental biology Despite the recent demonstrated successes and expansion of tools for the helminthiases outlined here and the development of some research capacity the evaluation found major deficiencies in our current control tools in diagnostics and in our fundamental knowledge of helminth biology and transmission dynamics as well as in capacity and policy for health research Thus the current research issues are summarized here and opportunities for improving disease control and reducing poverty are identified Recommendations are presented to inform public health policy guide implementation programs and focus the research community on the needs of disease control and the opportunities for bettering human welfare This is one of ten disease and thematic reference group reports that have come out of the TDR Think Tank all of which have contributed to the development of the Global Report for Research on Infectious Diseases of Poverty Preventive Chemotherapy in Human Helminthiasis ,2003
