

Homeostasis and Cell Transport Study Guide

- Obj. 1.1.1 Explain how homeostasis is maintained in a cell and within an organism's system (endotherms/exotherms, osmoregulation) and pH.
- Obj. 1.1.2 Analyze the cellular and physiological responses to changes in temperature, osmolarity, and pH in various organisms.
- Obj. 1.1.3 Explain why organisms require energy for maintaining homeostasis (active transport).

| 1. Explain homeostasis: internal factors, external factors, and external environmental challenges that organisms face and how they maintain the balance. (20%) | Homeostasis is a dynamic process where the body keeps a balance. The body that significantly maintains equilibrium for various needs. When homeostasis for the body structure breaks, results in death.                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| 2. How does a homeostatic system work? Give three examples. (20%)                                                                                              | Homeostatic system works by detecting changes in the environment and responding to them. Examples include: temperature, pH, and osmolarity.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
