Effects of Wetland Conversion to Farming on Water Quality and Sediment and Nutrient Retention in a Tropical Catchment Abias Uwimana,2019-11-26 The study used a combination of landscape scale synoptic surveys catchment reaches and mesocosm surveys experimental plots to assess the impacts of conversion of natural valley bottom wetlands to farming land on the water quality and retention of sediment and nutrients The results showed that temperature pH electrical conductivity and dissolved oxygen concentration decreased and total suspended solids TSS increased with storm water increase Nitrogen TN and phosphorus TP accumulated in the catchment during the dry season and washed into the water courses during the early stages of the higher flows with subsequent lower concentrations at the end of the rains due to dilution Large proportions of the annual loads of TSS TP and TN 93% 60% and 67% respectively were transported during rainfall events that occurred in 115 days Fishponds acted as temporal traps of TSS TN and TP at the early stages of farming and were a source of and TN and TP at the end of the farming period in contrast to rice farming that generated sediments and nutrients early in the farming period and trapped them at the end of the farming season Wetlands mostly acted as sinks but sometimes as a source of sediment and nutrients

Bibliographic Guide to Black Studies 1993 Schomburg Collection of Negro Literature and History,1994 A Strategic Reassessment of Fish Farming Potential in Africa José Aguilar-Manjarrez,Shree S. Nath,1998-01-01 Reprint First published in 1998 The present study is an update of an earlier assessment of warm water fish farming potential in Africa by Kapetsky 1994 The objective of this study was to assess locations and areal expanses that have potential for warm water and temperate water fish farming in continental Africa The study was based on previous estimates for Africa by the above author and on estimates of potential for warm water and temperate water fish farming in Latin America by Kapetsky and Nath 1997 However a number of refinements have been made The most important refinement was that new data allowed a sevenfold increase in resolution over that used in the previous Africa study and a twofold increase over that of Latin America i e to 3 arc minutes equivalent to 5 km x 5 km grids at the equator making the present results more usable in order to assess fish farming potential at the national level A geographical information system GIS was used to evaluate each grid cell on the basis of several land quality factors important for fish farm development and operation regardless of the fish species used Protected areas large inland water bodies and major cities were identified as constraint areas and were excluded from any fish farming development altogether Small scale fish farming potential was assessed on the basis of four factors water requirement from ponds due to evaporation and seepage soil and terrain suitability for pond construction based on a variety of soil attributes and slopes availability of livestock wastes and agricultural by products as feed inputs based on manure and crop potential and farm gate sales as a function of population density For commercial farming an urban market potential criterion was added based on population size of urban centres and travel time proximity Both small scale and commercial models were developed by weighting the above factors using a multi criteria decision making procedure A bioenergetics model was incorporated into the GIS to predict for the first time fish yields across Africa A gridded water temperature data set was used as input to a bioenergetics model to predict number of crops per year for the following three species Nile tilapia Oreochromis niloticus African catfish Clarias gariepinus and Common carp Cyprinus carpio Similar analytical approaches to those by Kapetsky and Nath 1997 were followed in the yield estimation However different specifications were used for small scale and commercial farming scenarios in order to reflect the types of culture practices found in Africa Moreover the fish growth simulation model documented in Kapetsky and Nath 1997 was refined to enable consideration of feed quality and high fish biomass in ponds The small scale and commercial models derived from the land quality evaluation were combined with the yield potential of each grid cell for each of the three fish species to show the coincidence of each land quality suitability class with a range of yield potentials Finally the land quality fish yield potential combinations were put together to show where the fish farming potential coincided for the three fish species
