101. A thermodynamic system is defined as a body or bodies having a common boundary. How are systems classified?
 Ans: Systems are classified into control and non-control systems. In control systems, the boundaries are fixed and immovable. In non-control systems, the boundaries are movable.
102. How are control systems classified?
 Ans: Control systems are classified into open loop and closed loop systems. In open loop systems, the output does not affect the input. In closed loop systems, the output affects the input.
103. What is a feedback system?
 Ans: A feedback system is a control system in which the output is fed back to the input to compare it with the reference input. The difference between the reference input and the feedback signal is used to generate the error signal, which is then used to adjust the system output.
104. What is a transfer function?
 Ans: A transfer function is a mathematical representation of the relationship between the input and output of a system. It is defined as the ratio of the output signal to the input signal, assuming zero initial conditions.
105. What is a block diagram?
 Ans: A block diagram is a graphical representation of a system. It shows the input, output, and internal components of the system. Each component is represented by a block, and the connections between blocks represent the signal flow.
106. What is a signal flow graph?
 Ans: A signal flow graph is a graphical representation of a system. It shows the input, output, and internal components of the system. Each component is represented by a node, and the connections between nodes represent the signal flow.
107. What is a root locus plot?
 Ans: A root locus plot is a graphical representation of the poles and zeros of a system's characteristic equation. It shows how the poles and zeros of the system move in the complex plane as a function of a system parameter.
108. What is a Bode plot?
 Ans: A Bode plot is a graphical representation of a system's frequency response. It consists of two plots: a magnitude plot and a phase plot. The magnitude plot shows the magnitude of the system's response as a function of frequency, and the phase plot shows the phase of the system's response as a function of frequency.
109. What is a Nyquist plot?
 Ans: A Nyquist plot is a graphical representation of a system's frequency response. It shows the complex plane plot of the system's frequency response. The plot is used to determine the stability of a system.
110. What is a Ziegler-Nichols method?
 Ans: The Ziegler-Nichols method is a technique for determining the PID controller parameters for a system. It involves applying a step change to the system and measuring the resulting response. The response is then used to determine the PID controller parameters.
