Love in the Time of AIDS Mark Hunter, 2021-12-22 In some parts of South Africa more than one in three people are HIV positive Love in the Time of AIDS explores transformations in notions of gender and intimacy to try to understand the roots of this virulent epidemic By living in an informal settlement and collecting love letters cell phone text messages oral histories and archival materials Mark Hunter details the everyday social inequalities that have resulted in untimely deaths Hunter shows how first apartheid and then chronic unemployment have become entangled with ideas about femininity masculinity love and sex and have created an economy of exchange that perpetuates the transmission of HIV AIDS This sobering ethnography challenges conventional understandings of HIV AIDS in South Africa Love in a Time of AIDS Gillian Paterson, 1996 The crisis created by HIV AIDS in health services medical science and the everyday lives of families and communities is well known Yet despite growing awareness the pandemic continues and research shows that the proportion of women among those newly infected is growing everywhere in the world Young women now account for two thirds of new infections among people between 15 and 24 What is becoming ever clearer is that where women s social economic and cultural status is low they are more likely to become infected with HIV and pass the virus on to others Vividly recounting the stories of women in many countries this book shows how the AIDS crisis makes improving the status of women not only a matter of theology and ethics but of health and survival That in turn challenges churches which often justify and even collude with forces that subordinate women to change attitudes and visions and to undertake creative new initiatives in their ministries of healing and hope
