Born in Alabama in 1933 and educated in Toledo and New York, Martin has lived and worked most of his life in Ohio. His parents appreciated literature and music and saw to it that their young son was immersed in the arts. The family moved to Toledo, Ohio, when Herbert was twelve years old. He began to write poetry during his undergraduate years at the University of Toledo, from which he graduated in 1964. Herbert Woodward Martin and the African American Tradition in Poetry chronicles the writing and performing career of Herbert W. Martin, focusing on the way his life has informed his art and situating his creative work within the context of the African American tradition in poetry. Author Ronald Primeau examines Martin's place in American literature with particular emphasis on his multidisciplinary talents and his contributions to the arts through his highly regarded performances of poetry, especially that of Paul Laurence Dunbar, and his acting, playwriting, and composing. Even though Martin's work is highly regarded, it has been anthologized.

Declaration of War Christopher Greenfield, 2021-11-27 Vanity is an iron curtain cursed upon those who choose to wield it So reads the last line in the foreword to Christopher Greenfield's newly renowned Declaration of War Influenced by the anti normative likes of Charles Bukowski the visionary idealism of Albert Camus the ruthless cultural critique of Friedrich Nietzsche and the naturalism of David Hume Greenfield calls into question via a series of short stories and poems the essential tenets of the human condition what it means to truly be free why we desire love and belonging wherein hatred and bigotry are rooted when we seemingly desire quite the opposite and the subliminal functions of power and authority that relentlessly work to keep us enslaved to our own primal self destructive tendencies in the midst of a society that has far outgrown the need for them Knowing first hand what it's like to be deemed the black dog rebel and the heretic of social circles Christopher Greenfield was intrigued by the curious fascination of his friends and colleagues The collection of works contained in the Declaration of War are based on real conversations debates and experiences that serve to allude to the grander image of human strife will power and the nature of one's own suffering that which if able to be harnessed may be used to create something beautiful beyond the absurdity of the superficial and mundane

Finding the World's Fullness Robert Cording, 2019-11-20 Forty years as a poet has kept Robert Cording looking at the details of everyday experience That long labor has brought him face to face with the inescapable complexity of a world that is full of suffering and injustice And grace This journey has convinced him that as Czeslaw Milosz puts it poetry embodies the double life of our common human circumstance as beings in between the dust that we are and the divinity to which we would aspire Cording's task has therefore been to evoke what he calls the primordial intuitions of Christianity that we live in a world we did not create that God's immanent presence is capable of breaking in on us at every moment that most of the time we cannot taste and see that presence because we live in a world of mirrors that only by attention can we live in the world but outside of our existing conceptions of it The reflections in Finding the World's Fullness comprising not only thoughts on metaphor but also close readings of poets ancient and modern including George Herbert Robert Browning Elizabeth Bishop and Stanley Kunitz suggest that as Richard Wilbur puts it The world's fullness is not made but found
