

2-7 When to repair

It is difficult to judge when to perform periodic inspections, maintenance and repairs. Although the wearing rate of each component differs depending on the grade of daily inspection, the skill in machine operation, the working conditions, the quality of used lubricating oil, the frequency of oil replacement, the quality of land to be dug, the digging rate, the schedule for maintenance and repairs should be decided considering the state of engine, the indication of the hour meter, the degree of wear in each part, the state of hydraulic system, your experience and data.

2.7.1 Category of maintenance

Prestart-up inspection	Execute every day before beginning operation
Maintenance after the first 25 service hours	Execute every 25 hours by the hour meter
Maintenance after the first 50 service hours	Execute once a week (every 50 hours by the hour meter)
Maintenance after the first 100 service hours	Execute every 100 hours by the hour meter
Maintenance after the first 250 service hours	Execute every 250 hours by the hour meter
Maintenance after the first 300 service hours	Execute every 300 hours by the hour meter
Maintenance after the first 500 service hours	Execute every 500 hours by the hour meter
Maintenance after the first 1,000 service hours	Execute every 1,000 hours by the hour meter
Maintenance after the first 2,000 service hours	Execute every 2,000 hours by the hour meter
