Improving household consumption and expenditure surveys' food consumption metrics Fiedler, John L., Mwangi, Dena M., 2016-11-18 As the nature of global malnutrition changes there is a growing need and increasing urgency for more and better information about food consumption and dietary patterns The past two decades have seen a dramatic increase in the number availability and analysis of the food consumption data collected in a variety of multipurpose household surveys referred to collectively as household consumption and expenditure surveys HCESs These surveys are heterogeneous and their quality varies substantially by country Still they share some common shortcomings in their measurement of food consumption nutrient intakes and nutrition status that undermine their relevance and reliability for purposes of designing and implementing food policies and programs This review crafts a strategic approach to the unfinished global agenda of improving HCESs collection of food consumption data Starting with the priority studies recommended by a 100 country HCES review Smith Dupriez and Troubat 2014 it focuses on a strategic subset of those studies that deal most directly and exclusively with the measurement of food and that are of fundamental importance to all HCES stakeholders in low and middle income countries Drawing from the literature this study provides a more detailed more circumspect justification as to why these particular studies are needed while identifying key hypotheses explaining why these studies are of growing urgency and demonstrating why now is a propitious time for undertaking them The review also identifies important study design considerations while pointing out potential challenges to successful implementation stemming from technical capacity economic administrative and political considerations Six key studies are rank ordered from a global perspective as follows taking into account 1 the likely shared consensus that a topic is an important source of measurement error in estimating consumption 2 the perceived urgency of the need for addressing a particular source of measurement error 3 the perceived likelihood of success that is that the efforts will improve the accuracy of measurement 4 whether or not the study entails modifying the questionnaire 5 the ease with which a study may begin and 6 the extent to which the study is independent of necessary negotiations with existing HCES stakeholders because of the types of changes it is likely to entail in either the questionnaire or the way the data have traditionally been processed

Global Economic Cooperation Rajat Kathuria, Neetika Kaushal Nagpal, 2015-11-23 This book discusses issues such as global financial crisis and global governance food security energy sustainability the global financial system trade and protectionism and growth and employment Since the outbreak of the financial as well as national debt crises in the Euro zone the focus of the G20 has shifted back to addressing short term issues These issues range from the dynamic effects of global imbalances and the appropriate degree of financial sector regulation to questions of austerity versus growth and the lack of a comprehensive framework for managing the international monetary system A further issue is the relevance of the G20 agenda for emerging market economies Global economic recovery still remains fragile and downside risks to global growth remain. Additionally, much of the agenda of the Seoul Development Consensus for shared growth launched in 2010 has yet to be fulfilled. A key discussion point in the book therefore is how to make a tangible and significant difference in people's lives by implementing an agenda of inclusive growth.

Nutrition Economics Suresh Babu, Shailendra Gajanan, J. Arne Hallam, 2016-11-02. Nutrition Economics: Principles and Policy Applications establishes the core criteria for consideration as new policies and regulations are developed, including application-based principles that ensure practical effective implementation of policy. From the economic contribution of nutrition on quality of life to the costs of malnutrition on society from both an individual and governmental level, this book guides the reader through the factors that can determine the success or failure of a nutrition policy. Written by an expert in policy development and incorporating an encompassing view of the factors that impact nutrition from an economic standpoint and their resulting effects, this book is unique in its focus on guiding other professionals and those in advanced stages of study to important considerations for correct policy modeling and evaluation. As creating policy without a comprehensive understanding of the relevant contributing factors that lead to failure is not an option, this book provides a timely reference. Connects the direct and indirect impacts of economic policy on nutritional status. Provides practical insights into the analysis of nutrition policies and programs that will produce meaningful results. Presents a hands-on approach on how to apply economic theory to the design of nutritional policies and programs.

Routledge Handbook of Food and Nutrition Security Bill Pritchard, Rodomiro Ortiz, Meera Shekar, 2016-03-31. The concept of food and nutrition security has evolved and risen to the top of the international policy agenda over the last decade. Yet it is a complex and multi-faceted issue requiring a broad and inter-disciplinary perspective for full understanding. This Handbook represents the most comprehensive compilation of our current knowledge of food and nutrition security from a global perspective. It is organized to reflect the wide scope of the contents; its four sections corresponding to the accepted current definitional frameworks prevailing in the work of multilateral agencies and mainstream scholarship. The first section addresses the struggles and progression of ideas and debates about the subject in recent years. The other sections focus on three key themes: how food has been and should be made available, including by improvements in agricultural productivity; the ways in which politico-economic and social arenas have shaped access to food; and the effects of food and nutrition systems in addressing human health, known as food utilisation. Overall, the volume synthesizes a vast field of information drawn from agriculture, soil science, climatology, economics, sociology, human and physical geography, the nutrition and health sciences, environmental science, and development studies.

The Handbook on Public Policy and Food Security provides multi disciplinary insight into food security analysis across the seventeen Sustainable Development Goals SDGs As food security is an essential outcome and a part of sustainable and healthy food systems this Handbook addresses the urgent need to provide a comprehensive overview of the field s current developments The Financialization of Commodity Markets A. Zarembo,Iver B. Neumann,2015-04-01 The landscape of commodity markets has drastically changed in recent years Once a market of refineries and mines it has become the market of investment funds and commodity trading advisors Given this transformation are commodity investments still as beneficial as 20 or 30 years ago This book is an attempt to answer these questions Hunger And Malnutrition As Major Challenges Of The 21st Century Raghbendra Jha,2018-12-27 The UN s Sustainable Development Goal SDG for Zero Hunger has refocused attention on hunger and malnutrition as major challenges for the 21st century and as essential desired goals for human development This volume provides key insights on how these challenges for food security can be addressed globally and in a number of countries that face these challenges most acutely According to the World Food Summit food security exists when all people at all times have physical and economic access to sufficient safe and nutritious food to meet their dietary needs and food preferences for an active and healthy life The implication is that lack of food security would overlap with hunger both overt and hidden and undernutrition and would have spillover effects onto the health of and labor market performance of those affected by such insecurity This range of issues have guided the choice of contributions to this volume Several manifestations of these topics are covered for a number of countries in Asia and Africa Public Health

Approaches to Non - Communicable Diseases JS Thakur,2015-01-01 A comprehensive text book by Wolters Kluwer Lippincott covering all key features that are very helpful for the medical students Nutrition and economic development Ecker, Olivier,Al-Riffai, Perrihan,Breisinger, Clemens,El-Batrawy, Rawia,2016-11-15 This book s main hypothesis is that Egypt s large food subsidy system has been ineffective in reducing undernutrition in fact it may have contributed to sustaining and even aggravating both nutrition challenges For a long time the subsidy system provided only calorie rich foods at very low and constant prices and with quotas much above dietary recommendations This system has created incentives to consume calorie overladen and unbalanced diets increasing the risks of child and maternal overnutrition and at high subsidy levels the risk of inadequate child nutrition Moreover the large public budget allocated to the food subsidies is unavailable for possibly more nutrition beneficial spending such as for child and maternal nutrition specific interventions The authors findings consistently suggest that in addition to the well known economic rationale for reforming the Egyptian food subsidy system there are strong reasons to reform food subsidies due to nutrition and public health concerns A fundamental food subsidy reform process has been under way since June 2014 The already implemented changes can be expected to have reduced some incentives for overconsumption and may have positive dietary effects However further major reform efforts are needed to transform the current subsidy system into a key policy instrument in the fight against malnutrition The findings of this book should be valuable to policy makers analysts development partners and others concerned with improving food security and promoting healthy nutrition in Egypt and other developing countries with large social protection programs

Measuring resilience in a volatile world ,2014-04-30 Substantial numbers of the world s chronically poor and malnourished population live in an increasingly volatile world The dangerous nexus of climate change rapid population growth conflict and food price volatility already appears to have pushed several poor regions into states of permanent crisis

even as the rest of the world has seen unprecedented progress against poverty This disturbing state of affairs along with our expanded knowledge of the intimate interactions between short term shocks and long run development has catalyzed widespread interest in resilience building and in what such a framework implies for understanding the causes and consequences of acute vulnerability to natural and man made disasters In this paper we ask what this paradigm implies for the measurement and analysis of resilience Resilience is fundamentally about complex dynamics Slower moving ecological economic demographic and social stressors create vulnerability to short run shocks which in turn can have long term consequences by reinforcing preexisting vulnerabilities In our view this basic conception of resilience has fundamental measurement implications First resilience can be measured and understood only through higher frequency surveys that capture the causes and consequences of time varying stressors and shocks including seasonal shocks Second resilience can be understood only through surveys that capture the multidimensional complexity of stressors shocks and feedback loops including the complex interactions between economic social and ecological forces Third the underlying stressors that create vulnerability and the resilience building interventions that reduce vulnerability can be gauged and evaluated only over the longer term This conceptualization of resilience motivates us to go a step further than existing research on resilience and on food and nutrition security measurement by outlining a far more expansive strategy for improving and scaling up the monitoring measurement and analysis of the world s most vulnerable populations We propose the development of a multicountry system of high frequency long term sentinel sites in the world s most vulnerable regions If implemented along the lines we conceive this system could be a high return investment for resilience building efforts since it would serve multiple purposes This system offers the only rigorous means of monitoring vulnerability and resilience in the world s most volatile regions This system would bolster existing early warning systems by complementing them with household level indicators This system would improve the targeting of emergency resources This system would be instrumental for diagnosing the underlying sources of vulnerability for identifying key thresholds of resilience and for designing appropriate resilience building strategies And this system would provide a rigorous foundation for large scale evaluations of resilience building activities While there are strong justifications for such a system the devil is necessarily in the details and much of this paper is concerned with those details Largely to learn from existing experience we first review existing measurement strategies that are similar in purpose or design to the sentinel system outlined above When implemented long term high frequency measurement systems have often yielded great benefits but been hampered by cost lack of institutional coordination and insufficient dissemination and usage of data The need to keep costs down and benefits widespread therefore motivates us to consider which countries in the world have the highest priority for the development of sentinel sites based on indicators such as child nutrition and health outcomes exposure to disasters and past emergency assistance levels from the international community We then turn to crucial issues of data collection design by outlining a hybrid sampling and survey design that will help achieve the various objectives outlined above while keeping costs down We also argue that the proliferation of mobile phones and other information and communications technologies offers substantial scope for a cost effective system of this kind far more so than would have been available in the past Finally we consider who should lead and contribute to this ambitious effort Since the principal advantage of this approach is that it can yield benefits for a wide range of institutions and purposes relief and development operations and research social and biophysical sciences and since the costs of a long term commitment to these sentinel surveys would be large indeed for any single agency we propose the need for a relatively broad consortium of international donors This consortium should first focus on establishing partnerships with national governments and then commit to long term resilience monitoring as well as domestic capacity building With this essential commitment in place this consortium would then need to secure implementing partners with a permanent presence on the ground as well as the technical expertise of international organizations of various sorts Ultimately we argue it is only this kind of long term cooperative commitment that will provide a scientific evidence base for diagnosing and resolving the world s worst problems of hunger poverty and malnutrition Only this kind of sentinel system can generate the data and evidence needed to inform actions to build resilience and to help the global community eliminate extreme poverty in the generation ahead The status quo is simply not enough

Issues and Challenges of Inclusive Development R. Maria Saleth,S. Galab,E. Revathi,2020-06-18 This book explores inclusive development in the Indian context not only within each of the country s major economic and social sectors but also across countries in the particular context of globalization In the emerging scenario of most expanding economies including India this topic remains particularly significant The book s sixteen chapters are divided into eight sections that address burning issues related to inclusive development historical setting and policy context current issues and future challenges inclusiveness in the agricultural sector inclusiveness in the industrial sector inclusiveness in the health sector inclusiveness and poverty inclusiveness in the social context and inclusiveness in the globalization context The book highlights several positive developments displayed by the Indian economy in recent years including the current growth rate of about 7 percent which is among the highest rates around the globe At the same time it draws attention to the fact that while there is every reason to feel proud of these achievements we cannot ignore the strains and brewing distress especially in rural areas or the concerns in environmental and social sectors including health and education relating to sociological divisions and disturbances water and air pollution and ecosystem and biodiversity losses Important and relevant from both academic and policy perspectives the book includes essays from some of the most eminent economists and social scientists in the South Asian region providing vital takeaways for researchers and NGOs as well as corporate sector and government decision makers

Imputing nutrient intake from foods prepared and consumed away from home and other composite foods ,2017-01-06 This paper assesses the Subramanian and Deaton S D approach for imputing the caloric intake of households from food prepared away from home FAFH and composite foods CF by juxtaposing

it with the imputations of alternative approaches and extends these approaches to four additional nutrients vitamin A iron zinc and calcium The apparent relative nutritional insignificance of FAFH and CF in Bangladesh obfuscates our efforts to assess alternatives to the S D approach to imputation and we remain uncertain about the relative value of the alternative imputation approaches examined FAFH and CF although widely consumed in Bangladesh constitute a relatively unimportant source of nutrients regardless of how the nutrient content of FAFH and CF is imputed

Mitigating poverty and undernutrition through social protection: A simulation analysis of the COVID-19 pandemic in Bangladesh and Myanmar

Ecker, Olivier, Alderman, Harold, Comstock, Andrew R., Headey, Derek D., Mahrt, Kristi, Pradesha, Angga, 2023-02-13 The COVID 19 pandemic resulted in severe income losses but little is known about its impacts on diets and nutritional adequacy or the effectiveness of social protection interventions in mitigating dietary and nutritional impacts We first assess the likely impacts of COVID 19 shocks in Bangladesh and Myanmar on poverty and food and nutrient consumption gaps We then analyze the estimated mitigating effects of five hypothetical social protection interventions of a typical monetary value 1 cash transfers 2 in kind transfers of common rice 3 in kind transfers of fortified rice enriched with multiple essential micronutrients 4 vouchers for a diversified basket of rice and non staple foods and 5 food vouchers with fortified rice instead of common rice The simulation results suggest modest effectiveness of the cash transfers for mitigating poverty increases and little effectiveness of all five transfers for preventing increasing food and nutrient consumption gaps among the poorest 40% Rice fortification is however effective at closing key micronutrient consumption gaps and could be a suitable policy instrument for averting hidden hunger during economic crises

The impacts of the COVID-19 crisis on maternal and child malnutrition in Myanmar: What to expect, and how to protect

Transforming agriculture for improving food and nutrition security among Nigerian farm households

Ecker, Olivier, Hatzenbuehler, Patrick L., Mahrt, Kristi, 2018-10-16 The release by the Nigerian Federal Ministry of Agriculture and Rural Development FMARD of the Agricultural Transformation Agenda ATA in 2010 and its successor strategy document the Agriculture Promotion Policy APP in 2016 as official policy strategy documents signals a shift in policymaker attention toward improving the performance of the agricultural sector in the country after decades of neglect This paper discusses the potential effects of changes in agricultural production practices due to these adjustments in strategy on food consumption and hence on food security and nutrition in Nigeria We outline the theoretical linkages between changes in agricultural production patterns by farm households and their food consumption decisions
