7 Dismantling the engine unit: removing the cylinder head and rotor - all models except RM50

1 As mentioned in the previous Section, all models except RM50 make use of CDI ignition systems. The CDI rotor are housed beneath the left-hand cover and should be removed to gain access to a larger central hole in the left-hand cover. First, a suitable drill bit should be ground to a taper to suit the hole in the cover. To ensure the pin will pass through the cover, the hole should be drilled to a depth of 10mm. Then, the pin should be inserted into the hole and the cover should be held in place.

Arrange the pin in the cover and remove the cover from the engine. To ensure the cover is held in place, it is necessary to draw off water. To draw the cover off the engine, draw off the water and place the cover on the engine. Then, use a screwdriver to push the cover off the engine. Draw the Woodruff key with grease and put it out of the way. Press it with the rotor for safe keeping.

Dismantling the engine unit: removing the gearbox sprocket

If the dismantling work is being carried out as a precursor to crankcase separation, the gearbox sprocket should be removed at this juncture. With the engine in position in the frame, it is easiest to release the sprocket retaining nut with the chain in place and the rear brake applied, as described in Section 3.6 of this Chapter.

With the engine on the workbench, the sprocket can be prevented from rotating by locking the crankshaft with a bar inserted through the connecting rod eye, and selecting top gear. Alternatively, loop the drive chain around the sprocket and clamp the ends with a self-locking wrench. Knock back the locking tabs, and slacken and remove the securing nut, washer and spacer.
