Wiring Diagram

The engine injection system controls the amount of fuel injected into the combustion chamber by the injectors. The fuel is drawn from the fuel tank and passes through the fuel filter and fuel pump. The fuel pump is driven by the engine and provides the high-pressure fuel to the injectors. The injectors are controlled by the ECU and inject the fuel into the combustion chamber. The ECU controls the injectors by sending a pulse-width modulated (PWM) signal to the injectors. The pulse width of the signal determines the amount of fuel injected. The ECU also controls the solenoid valve, which is used to drain the excess fuel from the injectors.
