What factors account for the variation across jurisdictions and geographic units in the ability to respond to and recover from a disaster? How does the recovery process impact the social, political, and economic institutions of the stricken communities? How do communities, especially rural ones, collaborate with multiple stakeholders (local, regional, state, national) during the transition from recovery to resilience? Can the collaborative nature of disaster recovery help build resilient communities? The primary audiences of this book are scholars in emergency and crisis management, planning and policy, disaster response and recovery, disaster sociology, and environmental management and policy. This book can also be used as a textbook in graduate and advanced undergraduate programs, courses on disaster management, disaster studies, emergency and crisis management, environmental policy and management, and public policy and administration.
