ANA's 6 Essential Nursing Documentation Principles

|--|---|
| Principle 1Documentation Characteristics | This principle defines high-quality nursing documentation as inclusive of the following characteristics: "accessible, accurate, relevant, consistent, auditable, clear, concise, complete, legible/readable, thoughtful, timely, contemporaneous, sequential, reflective of the nursing process, and retrievable on a permanent basis in a nursing-specific manner" (ANA, 2010, p. 12).                                  |
| Principle 2Education and Training        | Nurses must receive adequate training and education on the various facets of nursing documentation according to professional standards and their employing organization's policies and procedures. Training must include competency in using the EMR system specific to the employing institution and proficiency in any site-specific software utilized. Nurses must also be provided adequate time to complete documentation. |
| Principle 3Policies and Procedures       | Each nurse must become familiar with organizational policies and procedures related to documentation and maintain efficiency during EMR downtime or periods of electronic system malfunction.   |
| Principle 4Protection Systems            | The medical record (paper-based or electronic) must offer appropriate security measures for protecting data and patient information according to the organization's requirements, industry standards, and federal mandates. These protection systems include regulations outlined by the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA), which mandate patient confidentiality practices.                          |
| Principle 5Documentation Entries         | Everything entered into the medical record must be "accurate, valid, and complete; authenticated (factual), the author is identified, and nothing has been added or inserted; dated and time-stamped by the person who created the entry; legible/readable; and composed using standardized terminology including acronyms and symbols" (ANA, 2010, p. 14).  |
| Principle 6Standardized Terminologies    | Nurses should document utilizing standardized terminology to describe the planning, delivery, and evaluation of nursing care. Using standardized terminology helps with data aggregation and analysis.  |

Its focus on meaningful inclusion of students with disabilities and their non-disabled peers makes this book an ideal main text for courses in severe disabilities.

Encyclopedia of School Health David C. Wiley, Amy C. Cory, 2013-08-23. Children spend more time at school than anywhere else except home; thus, schools can have a major effect on children's health by providing a healthy physical environment, serving meals and snacks built around sound nutritional guidelines, and teaching about health as well as modeling and promoting healthy behaviors. School health services programs involve not only school nurses and focus not only on nursing practice standards and performance issues; they also include services and classes to teach students the information and skills they need to become health literate, to maintain and improve their health, to prevent disease, and to reduce risky behaviors impacting health. School nurses, teachers, administrators, health coordinators, guidance counselors, and social workers all join with
