churches Women, Leadership, and the Bible Natalie R. Wilson Eastman, 2014-05-16 What do you believe about women's roles in church leadership Should women lead groups that include men Should women preach Should women be ordained More importantly why do you believe what you believe Plenty of books exist telling women what to think precious few help women think for themselves particularly about theological issues Women Leadership and the Bible helps women learn to interpret the Bible and discern for themselves answers to their questions about women's roles in the church along with any other issue they may face in life In straightforward plain language Dr Natalie Eastman introduces women to a five step easy to follow process for studying the Bible and interpreting what they study NOTE to designer if there is not enough space on the back cover then cut the following section in italics This book encourages women that they can think for themselves and can analyze significant theological issues despite any hesitations they may have any conflict surrounding an issue or any lack of theological training By the time readers finish this book they will have a biblically defensible theologically reasoned and thoroughly discerned understanding of what they believe Scripture says about women's roles and how that understanding could play out within the church No longer will they feel as though they have nothing to contribute when the subject of women's roles or any other of life's theological questions arises The Radical Mind Chelsea Ebin, 2024-08-11 The Radical Mind is a groundbreaking analysis of the origins of the Christian Right whose political victories are radically reshaping the landscape of American society Scholars and the public alike have traditionally regarded the New Right and the Christian Right as separate movements The New Right is supposedly a secular right wing operation with purely political goals while the Christian Right is an evangelical Protestant movement largely motivated by religious convictions Insofar as both are conservative efforts most people view them as reactionary and driven by a culture war backlash against liberal changes to society Chelsea Ebin's The Radical Mind aims to overturn this consensus Through a close analysis of New Right architects Connaught Marshner and Paul Weyrich who is often seen as secular but was a committed Catholic this book explores the way conservative Catholics and Protestants overcame their long standing antipathy to form a political coalition what Ebin calls the New Christian Right Drawing on extensive archival research Ebin shows how the movement's key architects infused right wing activism with religion Rather than working to conserve the past this book argues that the New Christian Right is fundamentally a forward looking and proactive movement focused on remaking the political landscape in the United States The radical aims of the New Christian Right have been obscured by the way they cultivated a shared identity of victimhood and manipulated the discourse about backlash to create a nostalgic idea of the past that they then leveraged to justify their right wing policy goals The Catholic Protestant alliance constructed an imagined past that they projected into the future as their ideal vision of society Ebin calls this strategy prefigurative traditionalism a paradoxical prefiguring of a manufactured past Using this tactic the New Christian Right coalition disguised the radicality of its politics by framing their aims as reactionary and defensive rather than proactive and offensive An interdisciplinary work informed by the fields of history religious studies public law and American politics The Radical Mind offers a new and convincing explanation for the recent gains of the Christian Right and the morally supercharged political landscape we face today The Road to Jonestown Jeff Guinn, 2017-04-11 A portrait of the cult leader behind the Jonestown Massacre examines his personal life from his extramarital affairs and drug use to his fraudulent faith healing practices and his decision to move his followers to Guyana sharing new details about the events leading to the 1978 tragedy

Armsbearing and the Clergy in the History and Canon Law of Western Christianity Lawrence G. Duggan, 2013 The history of the vexed relationship between clergy and warfare is traced through a careful examination of canon law In the first millennium the Christian Church forbade its clergy from bearing arms In the mid eleventh century the ban was reiterated many times at the highest levels all participants in the battle of Hastings for example who had drawn blood were required to do public penance Yet over the next two hundred years the canon law of the Latin Church changed significantly the pope and bishops came to authorize and direct wars military religious orders beginning with the Templars emerged to defend the faithful and the Faith and individual clerics were allowed to bear arms for defensive purposes This study examines how these changes developed ranging widely across Europe and taking the story right up to the present day it also considers the reasons why the original prohibition has never been restored Lawrence G Duggan is Professor of History at the University of Delaware and research fellow of the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation

Coping with Defeat Jonathan Laurence, 2021-06-22 The surprising similarities in the rise and fall of the Sunni Islamic and Roman Catholic empires in the face of the modern state Coping with Defeat presents a historical panorama of the Islamic and Catholic political religious empires and exposes striking parallels in their relationship with the modern state Drawing on interviews site visits and archival research in Turkey North Africa and Western Europe Jonathan Laurence demonstrates how over hundreds of years both Sunni and Catholic authorities experienced three major shocks and displacements religious reformation the rise of the nation state and mass migration As a result Catholic institutions eventually accepted the state's political jurisdiction and embraced transnational spiritual leadership as their central mission Laurence reveals an analogous process unfolding across the Sunni Muslim world in the twenty first century Identifying institutional patterns before and after political collapse Laurence shows how centralized religious communities relinquish power at different rates and times Whereas early Christianity and Islam were characterized by missionary expansion religious institutions forged in the modern era are primarily defensive in nature They respond to the simple but overlooked imperative to adapt to political defeat while fighting off ideological challenges to their spiritual authority Among Laurence's findings is that the disestablishment of Islam the doing away with Islamic affairs ministries in the Muslim world would harm not help with reconciliation to the rule of law Examining upheavals in geography politics and demography Coping with Defeat considers how centralized religions make peace with the loss of prestige
