

Vocabulary Development

(Linda Bolin)

Prior to teaching a course, unit or even lesson, a teacher should select a list of words necessary to the understanding of the content. The vocabulary selected may be new to the students, or may be those introduced at a previous time. Even though a term may have been taught in a previous course, detail and breadth must be added to develop a mature understanding. The list may also include language that needs to be reviewed to help student access background knowledge.

Once the list of words has been selected, these six steps are necessary to effective instruction. (Building Background Knowledge, Marzano, 2004):

1. The teacher provides a description or an explanation rather than a definition. In fact, research indicates that definitions are rather useless in effective instruction.
2. Students restate the explanation IN THEIR OWN WORDS.
3. Students create nonlinguistic representation(s) for the term.
4. Students periodically do activities that help them add to their knowledge of vocabulary terms. Teachers give students multiple, varied exposures to the terms.
5. Students are periodically asked to discuss the terms with one another in small groups.
6. Periodically students are involved in games or game-like activities that allow them to play with the vocabulary terms.

The pages that follow contain instructional strategies, ideas and activities for each of the steps listed above. See the index for page numbers.

Vocabulary Development Steps and Activities Index
