Dear Journal,

Today was another long day. I made up my mind to help Maria with the washing. My mother's hands were as hard as leather. She was in the kitchen, but she needed the extra money she was earning. Waiting for the laundry, I had left before sunrise to look for work again. The need to find a steady job at the factory had been my last year. Now, the water from the factory to the house, trying to make it as a pair of hands. Most days, he comes home with nothing but red eyes and a quiet sigh.

For food, we had to wait again. Maria looked pale with some potatoes and onions, which she had as she could. I could tell she was still hungry, but she gave the last bit to my little brother. I try not to complain, but my stomach grows all the time now. For dinner, I walked past the soup kitchen in town. The line stretched around the block. The people looked like they hadn't eaten in days. I was lucky to have a meal at home, even if it wasn't much.

Wonder what things will get better. Mom says we have to keep hoping. I try, but sometimes, my stomach is empty as my plate.
