Greek Rhetorical Origins Of Christian Faith An Inquiry:

Greek Rhetorical Origins of Christian Faith James L. Kinneavy, 1987 What is the true of Christian faith Are the roots of this concept the same in both the Old and New Testaments With semantic historical and analytic evidence Kinneavy develops his hypothesis that the origin of some major aspects of the Christian concept of faith pistis in Greek can be traced to Greek classical rhetoric Kinneavy presents his case cumulatively with each stage differing substantially from traditional scholarship He begins by examining the notion of faith formulated by eight major Christian and Jewish theologians demonstrating that faith and rhetorical persuasion share certain important semantic elements which have made it possible for reach to accommodate the other The book goes on to present a meticulous case for the historical influence of Greek rhetoric on Hebraic thought specifically in the writers of the New Testament Contending that the effects of Hellenization were strongly felt particularly in the areas of Palestinian education and civic life his analysis opposes the prevailing isolation theories of early Christianity Kinneavy concludes with a novel rhetorical study of the several hundred occurrences of the Greek terms for faith and to believe searching for evidence of the contemporary meaning of persuasion and emerging with overwhelming support for the Greek influence on Christian faith A controversial and clearly argued work Greek rhetorical origins of Christian faith is a very original attempt to answer the age old question whence does faith spring and is an important contribution to the history of rhetoric Front flap

The Persuasive Preacher David A. Christensen, 2020-07-16 How can we preach persuasively without huckstering manipulating or coercing people Sadly we are seeing the fall of many pastors not for reasons of sexual immorality but the pursuit of pride and power The skillful use of marketing methods creates celebrity pastors who become significant influencers in the evangelical church The lure of success is seductive turning pastors into hucksters and Christians into consumers We need to heed the warnings of the New Testament about the pride of rhetoric and the pursuit of power David Christensen carefully analyzes the biblical warnings of Paul about the temptations of rhetorical sophistry in the first century church and applies them to pastoral ministry today God calls preachers to be ethical and effective persuaders David develops an ethical grid for pastoral persuasion using principles drawn from the Bible and social science along with practical illustrations from his years of ministry He calls preachers to be ethical and effective persuaders by emphasizing the centrality of the word of God while depending on the power of the Spirit of God
