Zicht op oud Valkenburg (ZH): Van de Romeinse tot de Franse tijd Jan Portengen, 1991 Border Communities at the Edge of the Roman Empire Jasper Bruin, 2025-10-01 In Roman times the area between the Lower Rhine and the Meuse in the present day province of South Holland in the Netherlands was known as the administrative district of the community of the Cananefates the civitas Cananefatium The formation of this community as well as the changes that took place within this group were researched by means of a systematic analysis of the archaeological remains In order to understand the role of the Roman state in these processes the urban and military communities were also studied In this way an overview was created of an administrative region in which aspects such as the interaction between the different groups the character of the rural community and the differences with other rural groups along the borders of the Roman Empire could be studied Graven bij Valkenburg Epko J. Medical Care for the Roman Army on the Rhine, Danube, and British Frontiers in the First, Second, and Early Third Centuries AD Patricia Anne Baker, 2004 This work examines military medical practice on the Roman frontiers of the Rhine the Danube and Britain challenging the supposition that a universal system of health care was provided to the legionary and auxiliary units in the Roman army It also considers whether the available information can illustrate differences in care provided to legionary and auxiliary units if the data suggests that treatment was offered by military doctors to civilians living in the area of the fortifications or vice versa and if the location of the soldiers treatment can be determined The author examines the remaining material evidence including literary sources and considers how medical care might have been influenced by other factors such as military events provincial policy and the cultural background of the soldiers By looking at the questions raised from a critical and anthropological angle the complex cultural matrix of the Roman army is brought to the foreground
