Fills a gap in the international literature by offering new insights into the heterogeneous ways in which African men are performing negotiating and experiencing masculinity Through their analysis of the depictions in film and literature of masculinities in colonial independent and post independent Africa the contributors open some key African texts to a more obviously politicized set of meanings Collectively the essays provide space for rethinking current theory on gender and masculinity how only some of the most popular theories in masculinity studies in the West hold true in African contexts how Western masculinities react with indigenous masculinities on the continent how masculinity and femininity in Africa seem to reside more on a continuum of cultural practices than on absolutely opposite planes and how generation often functions as a more potent metaphor than gender Lahoucine Ouzgane is Associate Professor of English Film Studies University of Alberta Canada

Street Children in Kenya Philip L. Kilbride, Collette A. Suda, Enos Njeru, 2000-03-30 As kinship relationships and support networks across family lines weaken with modernization economic stressors take a great toll on children Kenya like some other nations in Africa and around the globe has witnessed a rapid rise in street children The street children in Nairobi come from single parent families which are mostly headed by women Another group are AIDS orphans This study documents how street children in Nairobi follow survival strategies including for boys collecting garbage and for girls prostitution Gender is emphasized throughout the book Although impoverished families are the most likely to produce street children not all poor families have their children on the streets The problem of street children is a complex one that calls for a comprehensive and coordinated policy and program for intervention at all levels and in all sectors of society Alleviating poverty and rebuilding the family institution should be among the first steps in addressing the problem
