

Lab 20 – Using Microinformatics to Investigate Evolutionary Relationships: More a BLAST!

Introduction:

Genome-wide (GW) genomic studies using international consortia project genomes of the Human Genome Project, now also include and require 20,000+ 24,000 genes that define a human being. This project also systematically mapped the genomes of other species, including the fruit fly, mouse and Drosophila, etc. The project also includes sequencing of the genomes of other species and researchers compare and contrast the genomes and their function.

Why is this information important? Being able to identify the genes that are conserved among species of human genes can allow us to better understand genetic diseases. In addition, finding other conserved genes in other species helps us understand evolutionary relationships among organisms. Many of our genes are identical or similar to those found in other species.

Remember your laboratory project that investigated the evolutionary distance to fruit flies. In this lab, we will use genomic information. Does it make a difference? It should take you nearly 20 years to read through the entire human genome to try to locate the same amount of genes as that in fruit flies. This laboratory project provides a simplified technological method to reach it.

Microinformatics is a field that combines statistics, mathematical modeling, and computer-assisted analysis biological data. Using microinformatics methods, entire genomes can be quickly compared to identify evolutionary relationships and differences. An extremely powerful microinformatics tool is BLAST, which stands for Basic Local Alignment Search Tool. Using BLAST, you can input a gene sequence or protein sequence and search for genes that identify it. Similar sequences or a match alignment.

In this investigation, you will use BLAST to compare relationships and phylogenetic information to construct a cladogram, a phylogenetic tree called evolutionary tree. It is an evolutionary tree representation of species. Figure 1 below depicts a typical cladogram.

Note that the cladogram is rooted with Archaeopteryx and leads to birds representing a specific species. The other three taxa species are listed to show that they are evolutionarily close to each other.
