Gothic Images Of Race In Nineteenth Century Britain:

Gothic Images of Race in Nineteenth-Century England Howard L. Malchow, 1996 In pursuing the sources for late eighteenth and nineteenth century demonization of racial and cultural difference this book moves back and forth between the imagined world of literature and the real world of historical experience between fictional romance and what has been called the parallel fictions of the human sciences of anthropology and biology The author argues that the gothic genre and its various permutations offered a language that could be appropriated consciously or not by racists in a powerful and obsessively reiterated evocation of terror disgust and alienation But he shows that the gothic itself also evolved in the context of the brutal progress of European nationalism and imperialism and absorbed much from them This book explores both the gothicization of race and the racialization of the gothic as inseparable processes

Well-known scholars introduce readers to their particular fields, discuss influential critical debates, and offer illuminating contextual detail to situate authors and works in their wider cultural and historical contexts. Sections on publishing and readership, and a chronological survey of major literary developments between 1837 and 1901, are followed by essays on topics including sexuality, sensation, cityscapes, melodrama, epic, and economics. Victorian writing is placed in its complex relation to the Empire, Europe, and America, as well as to Britain's component nations. The final chapters consider how Victorian literature and the period as a whole influenced twentieth-century writers. Original, lucid, and stimulating, each chapter is an important contribution to Victorian literary studies. Together, the contributors create an engaging discussion of the ways in which the Victorians saw themselves and of how their influence has persisted.
