

What Happens . . .

Air contains the gas called oxygen. Your body needs oxygen just as much as it needs food and water. Oxygen gets into your body when you breathe. The harder your body works, the more oxygen it needs. That's why you breathe faster when you run and play. You can breathe without thinking about it. Your body does it all by itself.

When you breathe air out, you can blow a soap bubble or blow up a balloon.

. . . When You Eat?

When you put food into your mouth, your teeth grind it up. Then you can swallow the food. It goes down the esophagus to your stomach. Strong juices are sent there from your liver. They change the food some more. Then the food travels through your intestines.

The healthy parts of the food are sent into your blood. You get rid of any unneeded parts. When you urinate, liquid wastes leave your body. When you have a bowel movement, solid wastes leave your body.
