Il mène une double vie entre Bordeaux où il est sculpteur et Paris où il signe Corentin Fontaine les critiques d'art qu'il donne un grand quotidien. Veuf et père d'un fils de trente ans, il aime depuis plus de seize ans Thodore Glassmann, sa meilleure amie dont il n'a jamais eu l'amant qui a les plus belles jambes de Paris, une terrible cicatrice au front qu'elle cache sous une mèche et qui exerce la profession d'artiste plasticienne. C'est en regardant le journal télévisé que Corentin apprend un jour que Thodore a été prise en otage ainsi que quatre Islandais par des rebelles du Front de libération du Tamalu, et publie l'oublié qui n'a de réel public que le nom situé quelque part en Afrique australe. Bénévolement, Corentin va entreprendre des démarches multiples auprès de diplomates et de journalistes pour tenter de faire libérer Thodore. Ce roman est construit comme un journal de bord qui relate d'une part la étrange relation qui s'est forgée entre Corentin et Thodore depuis leur première rencontre et d'autre part les efforts méritoires entrepris par Corentin pour retrouver un jour Thodore, la femme de sa vie. Au point médian du livre se situe une scène d'une violence rare. C'est le récit d'un viol subi par une jeune fille dans sa chambre d'étudiante et qui l'a brisée jamais en lui laissant un goût de mort et au front une cicatrice. On ne sait rien de l'identité de cette jeune fille mais le lecteur évidemment la reconnaît.

Les nouvelles frontières de l'âge Richard Lefrançois, 2004. Propose une synthèse sur les implications démographiques, politiques, économiques et sociales du vieillissement de la population dans les pays industrialisés et une présentation des particularités psychologiques des personnes âgées.
