Schooling Selves Peter Cave, 2016-06-07 Balancing the development of autonomy with that of social interdependence is a crucial aim of education in any society but nowhere has it been more hotly debated than in Japan where controversial education reforms over the past twenty years have attempted to reconcile the two goals In this book Peter Cave explores these reforms as they have played out at the junior high level the most intense pressure point in the Japanese system a time when students prepare for the high school entrance exams that will largely determine their educational trajectories and future livelihoods Cave examines the implementation of relaxed education reforms that attempted to promote individual autonomy and free thinking in Japanese classrooms As he shows however these policies were eventually transformed by educators and school administrators into curricula and approaches that actually promoted social integration over individuality an effect opposite to the reforms intended purpose With vivid detail he offers the voices of teachers students and parents to show what happens when national education policies run up against long held beliefs and practices and what their complex and conflicted interactions say about the production of self and community in education The result is a fascinating analysis of a turbulent era in Japanese education that offers lessons for educational practitioners in any country

Social Media in Rural China Tom McDonald, 2016-09-13 China s distinctive social media platforms have gained notable popularity among the nation s vast number of internet users but has China s countryside been left behind in this communication revolution Tom McDonald spent 15 months living in a small rural Chinese community researching how the residents use social media in their daily lives His ethnographic findings suggest that far from being left behind many rural Chinese people have already integrated social media into their everyday experience Throughout his ground breaking study McDonald argues that social media allows rural people to extend and transform their social relationships by deepening already existing connections with friends known through their school work or village while also experimenting with completely new forms of relationships through online interactions with strangers particularly when looking for love and romance By juxtaposing these seemingly opposed relations rural social media users are able to use these technologies to understand capitalise on and challenge the notions of morality that underlie rural life Rights, Cultures, Subjects and Citizens Susanne Brandtstädter, Peter Wade, Kath

Woodward, 2013-09-13 This book questions the political logic of foregrounding cultural collectives in a world shaped by globalization and neoliberalization Throughout the world it is no longer only individuals but increasingly collective cultures who are made responsible for their own regulation welfare and enterprise This appears as a surprising shift from the tenets of classical liberalism which defined the ideal subject of politics as the unencumbered self the free equal and self governing individual The increasing promotion and recognition of cultural rights in international legislation multiculturalism and public debates on culture as a political problem more generally indicate that culture has become a more central terrain for governance and struggles around rights and citizenship On the basis of case studies from China Latin America and North America the contributors of this book explore the links between culture civility and the politics of citizenship They argue that official reifications of culture in relation to citizenship and even the recognition of cultural rights may obey strategies of governance and control but that citizens may still use new cultural rights and networks and the legal mechanisms that have been created to protect them in order to pursue their own agendas of empowerment This book was originally published as a special issue of Economy and Society Constructing Modern Asian Citizenship Edward Vickers, Krishna Kumar, 2014-12-05

In many non Western contexts modernization has tended to be equated with Westernization and hence with an abandonment of authentic indigenous identities and values This is evident in the recent history of many Asian societies where efforts to modernize spurred on by the spectre of foreign domination have often been accompanied by determined attempts to stamp national variants of modernity with the brand of local authenticity Asian values Chinese characteristics a Japanese cultural essence and so forth Highlighting or exaggerating associations between the more unsettling consequences of modernization and alien influence has thus formed part of a strategy whereby elites in many Asian societies have sought to construct new forms of legitimacy for old patterns of dominance over the masses The apparatus of modern systems of mass education often inherited from colonial rulers has been just one instrument in such campaigns of state legitimation This book presents analyses of a range of contemporary projects of citizenship formation across Asia in order to identify those issues and concerns most central to Asian debates over the construction of modern identities Its main focus is on schooling but also examines other vehicles for citizenship formation such as museums and the internet the role of religion in particular Islam in debates over citizenship and identity in certain Asian societies and the relationship between state centred identity discourses
