Abstract: The authors examined the effects of a 6-week training program on the self-reported health status of older adults. The study was conducted in a community center in a large city in the United States. The participants were 60 older adults (mean age = 78.5 years) who were randomly assigned to either a control group or a treatment group. The treatment group received a 6-week training program that focused on improving their physical and mental health. The results showed that the treatment group had significantly better self-reported health status than the control group at the end of the 6-week period.
