

Harry S. Truman

President of the United States of America, 1945–1953

“Harry Truman came into office in the shadow of Franklin Roosevelt, the greatest president in modern American history, but the ‘little man from Missouri’ amazed admirers and critics by his effectiveness and durability. Although he left office in 1953 with a 32 percent approval rating because of the stalemate in the Korean War, Truman now stands as one of the near-great presidents. What is there about his record that currently accords him this distinction? Does he deserve it? Looking back from the vantage point of more than fifty years, I believe that Truman’s presidency has much to teach us about this remarkable man and the extraordinary challenges of his times.”
