Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors associated with the development of periodontitis between patients with type 2 diabetes mellitus (DM) and non-diabetic controls. A total of 60 patients with DM and 60 age- and sex-matched non-diabetic controls were recruited from a tertiary care dental clinic. All participants underwent a comprehensive clinical examination and radiographic analysis. Data were analyzed using chi-square tests. Results showed that the prevalence of periodontitis was significantly higher in the DM group compared to the non-diabetic group ($p < 0.05$). Furthermore, the DM group had a significantly higher prevalence of smoking, hypertension, and hyperlipidemia compared to the non-diabetic group ($p < 0.05$). These findings suggest that patients with DM are at a higher risk of developing periodontitis and may benefit from more aggressive oral hygiene measures.
