General Technical Report RMRS ,1998      The Northern Goshawk in Utah Russell T. Graham,1999 This assessment describes northern goshawk Accipiter gentilis habitat in the State of Utah Because of fire exclusion insect and disease epidemics timber harvest livestock grazing or a combination of these factors the forests and woodlands of Utah have changed drastically since the early 1900 s Forests are now dominated by mid and late successional species Douglas fir white fir and subalpine fir rather than the early successional species lodgepole and ponderosa pine Along with these changes came suspected declines in goshawk populations Goshawk habitat in Utah was assessed using potential vegetation types current vegetation types and expert knowledge Subalpine fir 17 percent and quaking aspen 10 percent potential vegetation types were the most common forest types in the State Nearly 95 percent of the subalpine fir potential vegetation type was rated as high or medium for nesting habitat while nearly 90 percent of the quaking aspen potential vegetation type was rated as high or medium for nesting Similarly combining nesting and foraging preferences 70 percent of the subalpine fir potential vegetation type is rated as either high value or optimum habitat In addition throughout Utah all of the high value habitats are well connected The present conditions of the forests and woodlands of Utah are prone to insect and disease epidemics in addition to the risk of stand replacing fires To ensure the goshawk s continued existence in Utah will require the restoration of these degraded habitats and the protection of native processes      The Northern Goshawk in Utah ,1999      Single

USDA Forest Service Experimental Forests and Ranges Deborah C. Hayes, Susan L. Stout, Ralph H. Crawford, Anne P. Hoover, 2014-07-22 USDA Forest Service Experimental Forests and Ranges EFRs are scientific treasures providing secure protected research sites where complex and diverse ecological processes are studied over the long term This book offers several examples of the dynamic interactions among questions of public concern or policy EFR research and natural resource management practices and policies Often trends observed or expected in the early years of a research program are contradicted or confounded as the research record extends over decades The EFRs are among the few areas in the US where such long term research has been carried out by teams of scientists Changes in society s needs and values can also redirect research programs Each chapter of this book reflects the interplay between the ecological results that emerge from a long term research project and the social forces that influence questions asked and resources invested in ecological research While these stories include summaries and syntheses of traditional research results they offer a distinctly new perspective a larger and more complete picture than that provided by a more typical 5 year study They also provide examples of long term research on EFRs that have provided answers for questions not even imagined at the time the study was installed Chequamegon-Nicolet
