Magic and the Mind Eugene Subbotsky, 2010-03-31 Magical thinking and behavior have traditionally been viewed as immature misleading alternatives to scientific thought that in children inevitably diminish with age In adults these inclinations have been labeled by psychologists largely as superstitions that feed on frustration uncertainty and the unpredictable nature of certain human activities In Magic and the Mind Eugene Subbotsky provides an overview of the mechanisms and development of magical thinking and beliefs throughout the life span while arguing that the role of this type of thought in human development should be reconsidered Rather than an impediment to scientific reasoning or a byproduct of cognitive development in children magical thinking is an important and necessary complement to these processes enhancing creativity at problem solving and reinforcing coping strategies among other benefits In adults magical thinking and beliefs perform important functions both for individuals coping with unsolvable problems and stressful situations and for society enabling mass influence and promoting social harmony Operating in realms not bound by physical causality such as emotion relationships and suggestion magical thinking is an ongoing developing psychological mechanism that Subbotsky argues is integral in the contexts of politics commercial advertising and psychotherapy and undergirds our construction and understanding of meaning in both mental and physical worlds Magic and the Mind represents a unique contribution to our understanding of the importance of magical thinking offering experimental evidence and conclusions never before collected in one source It will be of interest to students and scholars of developmental psychology as well as sociologists anthropologists and educators
