The resolution is a response to the AAUP's concern that the term "graduate" is being used by some institutions to describe students who have completed only a two-year program. The resolution states that the term "graduate" should be used only for those who have completed a graduate-level program, and that institutions should not use the term to describe students who have completed only a two-year program. The resolution also states that institutions should not use the term "graduate" to describe students who have completed only a two-year program, and that institutions should not use the term "graduate" to describe students who have completed only a two-year program.
