

The background of the cover is a dark, textured grey. On the left side, there is a detailed illustration of a lightbulb. The base of the lightbulb is rendered with dark, swirling brushstrokes in shades of blue, purple, and black. The glass part of the bulb is transparent, revealing internal filaments. From the top of the bulb, a vibrant explosion of paint splashes and brushstrokes erupts. These splashes are in various colors including bright yellow, orange, red, pink, blue, and white, creating a sense of dynamic energy and creativity. The overall composition suggests a 'bright idea' or creative spark.

The Right to Employee Inventions in Patent Law Kazuhide Odaki, 2018-10-18 Although employers are required to pay compensation for employee inventions under the laws in many countries existing legal literature has never critically examined whether such compensation actually gives employee inventors an incentive to invent as the legislature intends This book addresses the issue through reference to recent large scale surveys on the motivation of employee inventors in Europe the United States and Japan and studies in social psychology and econometrics arguing that the compensation is unlikely to boost the motivation productivity and creativity of employee inventors and thereby encourage the creation of inventions It also discusses the ownership of inventions made by university researchers giving due consideration to the need to ensure open science and their academic freedom Challenging popular assumptions this book provides a solution to a critical issue by arguing that compensation for employee inventions should not be made mandatory regardless of jurisdiction because there is no legitimate reason to require employers to pay it This means that patent law does not need to give employee inventors an incentive to invent separately from the incentive to innovate which is already given to employers

The Co-creative University Łukasz Mamica, 2021-06-29 The co creative university has become the main driver of social and economic development stimulating internal students and academics and external creativity companies and institutional environment as well as cooperation in various areas e.g. applied graduation theses research projects lifelong learning. Intended as a contribution to a better understanding of how universities create value in numerous areas, this book discusses the determinants of creativity and ways of stimulating it with a special focus on approaches and practical solutions relevant to teaching. Examples include problem-oriented student theses which represent a successful combination of creativity with practical knowledge. Based on the findings of international surveys of students, the author offers an in-depth analysis of the differences between what they expect from universities and the degree to which their expectations are met. Comparing students' opinions with those of employees of international corporations working graduates permitted the author to test the actual utility of selected aspects of university education. Regrettably, both groups of respondents gave low ratings to support for developing creativity, which should serve as a warning sign and inform future reforms at this level of education. This book is primarily targeted to those involved in education policy making and socio-economic development. It provides a rich source of information for university managers on how to better fulfil their missions based on the idea of co-creativity. It also suggests how to improve the effectiveness of research and education in order to ensure that both can better respond to current development challenges.
