The Motives of Self-Sacrifice in Korean American Culture, Family, and Marriage Chul Woo Son, 2014-01-24 The concept of self sacrifice is highly important to Korean Americans With hierarchy of age social status and gender defined roles taking primacy over equality and justice self sacrifice becomes instrumental in maintaining family and social relationships Unfortunately in family relationships sacrifice has more to do with submission and endurance than it does with sacrificial service that is redemptive and mutually beneficial When self sacrifice carries hidden motives coercive responsibility obligation shame guilt or one's reputation that self sacrifice is not self giving neither serving nor being of mutual benefit In this context it is important to explore the attitudes and motives of self sacrifice in Korean American families In unlocking and exploring the dynamics of the theology and practice of self sacrifice for Korean Americans this book explores cultural virtues marital relationships gender inequality domestic violence and their theological implications The author introduces a new approach and model with a proposal for a healthier and a more judicious understanding of self sacrifice for Korean American family relationships The element of equal regard as pertaining to self sacrifice offers Korean Americans a refreshing hope in the perspective of familial relationships and a liberating casting off of culturally and religiously imposed burdens The Korean

American family ought to be grounded on a love ethic of equal regard and place its value on mutuality self sacrifice and individual fulfillment When this is done sacrificial love can be understood as justly appropriated for both husbands and wives males and females and parents and children Thus Christian teaching and theology may deliver a more transparent message of true agape and its liberating effects for the marginalized especially women and children

Procedures in Marriage and Family Therapy Gregory W. Brock, Charles P. Barnard, 1999

Most writing in marriage and family therapy presents readers with an established system of how to change families so as to relieve the symptoms of the stress they are suffering The reader is encouraged to follow a rigid system and adopt one particular theoretical basis for bringing about change The authors two hands on teachers offer something different They are sharing a clinical anthropologist s view of what happens when a family interacts with a professional who has dallied with the fads but finds success in doing what works The authors have gathered data and organized it into a multifaceted notebook with value for both the novice and more experienced therapist Hidden behind the descriptions of what to do and when readers can see the message of gentle care offered to families in pain Topics covered include first contact procedures assessment initial and middle stage treatment procedures procedures for challenging sessions and more A resource all clinicians can draw upon especially those early in their careers and those just beginning as marriage and family therapists

The Mental Health of Refugees Kenneth E. Miller, Lisa M. Rasco, 2004-05-20 It is estimated that at least 33 million people around the world have been displaced from their homes by war or persecution Numerous studies have documented high rates of psychological distress among these survivors of extreme violence and forced migration yet very few have access to clinic based mental health care In any case clinic based services cannot adequately address the constellation of displacement related stressors that affect refugees daily whether in a new region of their homeland or a new country stressors such as social isolation the loss of previously valued social roles poverty and a lack of employment opportunities and difficulties obtaining education and medical care Additionally many refugees from non western societies find western methods of psychiatric and psychological healing culturally alien or stigmatizing and therefore underutilize such services This book brings together an international group of experts on the mental health of refugees who have pioneered a new approach to healing the psychological wounds of war and forced migration Their work is guided by an ecological model which in contrast to the prevailing medical model of psychiatry and clinical psychology emphasizes the development of culturally grounded mental health interventions in non stigmatized community settings The ecological model also prioritizes synergy with natural community resources to promote adaptation prevention over treatment the active involvement of community members in all phases of the intervention process and the empowerment of marginalized communities to address their own mental health needs Drawing on their expertise in community psychology prevention science anthropology social psychology social psychiatry public health and child development the authors present a variety of highly innovative culturally grounded interventions designed to improve the mental health and psychosocial well being of communities that have survived the nightmares of political repression civil war and genocide They discuss the various conceptions of well being and distress that have informed their projects their own integrations of western and indigenous approaches to understanding and relieving psychological distress and in several instances their creative use of well trained paraprofessionals They examine with remarkable candor the challenges they have faced in carrying out their work in extraordinarily demanding conditions An extended introductory chapter reviews and analyzes what we know about the impact of political violence and exile on mental health and lays out the ecological model in rich theoretical and empirical context The first of two concluding chapters addresses the critical and often neglected issue of the evaluation of community based interventions in conflict and post conflict settings the second sums up the implications of the achievements and limitations of the programs described poses questions that must be answered such as How adequate is the PTSD construct in capturing the nature of refugee trauma and suggests numerous directions for future research and practice The Mental Health of Refugees Ecological Approaches to Healing and Adaptation is an essential reference for all professionals who seek to serve members of this vulnerable population for those who train and supervise them and for program administrators and policymakers concerned with refugee well being It is also an excellent resource for graduate courses in public mental health community psychology and psychiatry refugee and immigrant studies psychological trauma medical anthropology and ethnopolitical violence
