

In "The Sisters," the first story in Dubliners, Joyce describes the young protagonist as being haunted by the face of the deceased Father Flynn:

Indent 1/2"

In the dark of my room I imagined that I saw the heavy grey face of the paralytic. I drew the blankets over my head and tried to think of Christmas. But the grey face still followed me. It murmured; and I understood that it desired to confess something. I felt my soul receding into some pleasant and vicious region; and there again I found it waiting for me. It began to confess to me in a murmuring voice and I wondered why it smiled continually and why the lips were so moist with spittle. But then I remembered that it had died of paralysis and I felt that I too was smiling feebly as if to absolve the simoniac of his sin.

Bombaro, 2012-09-06 In today's world of modern research methods the irony is that even though more materials are readily available now than ever before this proliferation of sources has actually made the process more difficult for the novice researcher. In addition today's professors expect high quality sources to be used in students' undergraduate research precisely because so much information is available; however, without instruction many students are not even aware of the standard history sources that they should be using routinely for history research projects. Finding History is a practical and modern guide to research for history projects, helping to sort through the available resources and technology for students, scholars, and librarians. Finding History includes practical step-by-step instructions for discovering historical evidence using library catalogs, databases, and websites. It simplifies and clarifies the research process so that students new to the experience may locate appropriate research material with the same skill as seasoned historians. This book addresses the information literacy skills defined by the American Library Association and the American Historical Association, which include recognizing the need for scholarly historical information, defining and identifying the need for primary, secondary, and tertiary sources, knowing what finding tools are available to help locate historical sources, using history research tools efficiently and effectively, learning research vocabulary as well as the vocabulary of the historical profession, making evaluative judgments about the scholarly value of materials once they are located, physically acquiring research materials, using research material effectively to support a thesis or argument, and using research material ethically and responsibly. Including search samples and tables, Finding History is a valuable resource for anyone wanting to ensure their research draws from the best available sources and those needing instruction in locating, obtaining, evaluating, and using scholarly sources efficiently, directly, and ethically.

The Semantics and Pragmatics of Quotation Paul Saka,Michael Johnson,2017-12-07 The chapters in this volume address a variety of issues surrounding quotation such as whether it is a pragmatic or semantic phenomenon what varieties of quotation exist and what speech acts are involved in quoting Quotation poses problems for many prevailing theories of language One fundamental principle is that for a language to be learnable speakers must be able to derive the truth conditions of sentences from the meanings of their parts Another popular view is that indexical expressions like I display a certain fixity that they always refer to the speaker using them Both of these tenets appear to be violated by quotation This volume is suitable for scholars in philosophy of language semantics and pragmatics and for graduate students in philosophy and linguistics The book will also be useful for researchers in other fields that study quotation including psychology and computer science
