Finally, concerning a third, Barro's methodology may be problematic. In his paper, Barro (1997) uses a series of 1000 replications of the model to estimate the effect of the variables on the growth rate. However, the model is not estimated using the same data as the data used in the paper. This is because the data used in the paper are not the same as the data used in the model. This is a problem because the model is not estimated using the same data as the data used in the paper. This is a problem because the model is not estimated using the same data as the data used in the paper.

Employment in health care professions were also affected with people with mental health problems being less likely to be employed in health care professions and more likely to be employed in other sectors (e.g. retail, manufacturing, etc.).
