Local Climate Action Planning:

Local Climate Action Planning Michael R. Boswell, Adrienne I. Greve, Tammy L. Seale, 2012-07-16 Climate change is a global problem but the problem begins locally. Cities consume 75% of the world's energy and emit 80% of the world's greenhouse gases. Changing the way we build and operate our cities can have major effects on greenhouse gas emissions. Fortunately, communities across the U.S. are responding to the climate change problem by making plans that assess their contribution to greenhouse gas emissions and specify actions they will take to reduce these emissions. This is the first book designed to help planners, municipal staff and officials, citizens and others working at local levels to develop Climate Action Plans. CAPs are strategic plans that establish policies and programs for mitigating a community's greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions. They typically focus on transportation, energy use and solid waste and often differentiate between community-wide actions and municipal agency actions. CAPs are usually based on GHG emissions inventories which identify the sources of emissions from the community and quantify the amounts. Additionally, many CAPs include a section addressing adaptation: how the community will respond to the impacts of climate change on the community such as increased flooding, extended drought or sea level rise. With examples drawn from actual plans, Local Climate Action Planning guides preparers of CAPs through the entire plan development process, identifying the key considerations and choices that must be made in order to assure that a plan is both workable and effective.

Climate Action Planning Michael R. Boswell, Adrienne I. Greve, Tammy L. Seale, 2019-07-16 Climate change continues to impact our health and safety, the economy and natural systems. With climate-related protections and programs under attack at the federal level, it is critical for cities to address climate impacts locally. Every day there are new examples of cities approaching the challenge of climate change in creative and innovative ways, from rethinking transportation to greening city buildings to protecting against sea level rise. Climate Action Planning is designed to help planners, municipal staff and officials, citizens and others working at local levels to develop and implement plans to mitigate a community's greenhouse gas emissions and increase the resilience of communities against climate change impacts. This fully revised and expanded edition goes well beyond climate action plans to examine the mix of policy and planning instruments available to every community. Boswell, Greve and Seale also look at process and communication: How does a community bring diverse voices to the table? What do recent examples and research tell us about successful communication strategies? Climate Action Planning brings in new examples of implemented projects to highlight what has worked and the challenges that remain. A completely new chapter on vulnerability assessment will help each community to identify their greatest risks and opportunities. Sections on land use and transportation have been expanded to reflect their growing contribution to greenhouse gas emissions. The guidance in the book is put in context of international, national and state mandates and goals. Climate Action Planning is the most comprehensive book on the state of the art science and practice of local climate action planning. It should be a first stop for any local government interested in addressing climate change.

Climate Mitigation Quick Start Guide Milestone Three ICLEI - Local Governments for Sustainability

Staff, 2012-04-10 This Quick Start Guide helps local government sustainability and planning professionals create a Climate Action Plan that enables local progress toward a clear and measurable reduction in greenhouse gas GHG emissions. A Climate Action Plan is a description of actions, policies, programs, and projects to reduce GHG emissions. The plan conveys both the overarching vision and a detailed roadmap to guide local efforts. The Climate Action Plan can stand alone or be incorporated into another plan or document your local government is preparing such as a sustainability plan, comprehensive plan, or energy plan. This Quick Start Guide will help you create a plan that serves as a framework that documents, coordinates, and measures your local government's efforts moving forward. It will also help you create a plan that is actionable via a timeline, financing, and assignment of responsibility to departments or staff. This Quick Start Guide is the third in a series to assist local governments to understand and act to reduce their impact on climate change. Creating a Climate Action Plan is the third step in a framework developed by ICLEI Local Governments for Sustainability USA. ICLEI called the Five Milestones for Climate Mitigation.

Local Governments and Climate Change Maryke van Staden, Francesco Musco, 2010-04-05 Global warming is changing the world as we know it. Climate change can have catastrophic impacts in numerous cities across the world. It is time for us to react quickly and effectively. The European Community EC has been leading the fight against climate change, making it one of its top priorities. We have introduced the most ambitious targets of their kind known as the 20-20-20 by 2020 initiative within the Climate Action and Renewable Energy Package. As a result, European Member States have taken on a commitment to curb their CO₂ emissions by at least 20% by 2020. These targets are indeed commendable; however, they are only the start if we are to avoid the consequences of global warming. Whilst top-level coordination from the European Institutions and Member State governments is vital, the role of mitigating and adapting to climate change at local level must not be forgotten. In fact, here cities, regions, and their citizens play a significant role. It is therefore vital they become directly involved in the climate change challenge. The European Commission therefore launched in 2008 a new initiative, the Covenant of Mayors, which brings together a network of European mayors in a voluntary effort to go beyond the European Union's already ambitious targets. Half of our greenhouse gas emissions (GHGs) are created in and by cities.

Justice in Climate Action Planning Brian Petersen, Hélène B. Ducros, 2021-12-01 This edited volume examines how climate action plans engage justice at the scale of the city. Recent events in the United States make the context particularly ripe for a discussion of justice in urban climate politics. On the one hand, the emergence of the Black Lives Matter movement, George Floyd's death, and the prominence of racial discrimination in the public realm have mainstreamed the notion of justice. On the other hand, the dire consequences of increased frequency and severity of climate events on vulnerable segments of urban populations are undeniable. While some cities have been proactive about integrating justice in their climate action planning, in most places, an explicit and systematic link between both spheres has been lacking. This book explores this interface as it seeks to understand how cities can respond to climate change in a just way and for just outcomes While resilience strategies based on development may engage historic inequities they may at the same time result in marginalizing certain populations through various processes from mismatched solutions to outright exclusion and climate gentrification By identifying how certain populations are included in or excluded from climate action planning practices the chapters in this volume draw on case studies to outline the differential outcomes of climate action in American cities also proposing a template for comparative work beyond the US The authors tackle the debate about how justice is or is not integrated in climate action plans and assess practical implications while also making theoretical and methodological contributions As it fills a gap in the literature at the intersection of justice and climate action the book produces new insights for a wide ranging audience students practitioners policy makers planners the non profit sector and scholars in geography urban planning urban studies environmental studies ecology political science or anthropology Along five axes of investigation theory resilience equity community and comparison as method the contributors offer various pathways into the intersection between urban climate action and different understandings of justice Collectively they invite a reflection that can lead to practical initiatives in climate mitigation while also advancing the theorization of social justice to account for the urban as a node where in justice plays out and can be addressed with significant results

Advanced Studies in Efficient Environmental Design and City Planning Ferdinando Trapani,Nabil Mohareb,Federica Rosso,Denia Kolokotsa,Sreetheran Maruthaveeran,Mahmoud Ghoneem,2021-09-24 This book explains how learning from past mistakes in urban design can help to enhance sustainable cities and how the principles of Green Urbanism can yield more resilient urban settlements Environmental design is a fundamental principle in shaping cities However environmental challenges like increased resource consumption water degradation and waste related issues are among the greatest problems now facing humanity which is why these issues need to be considered with regard to smart cities either for the development of new urban centers or for the transformation of existing cities The book not only discusses the importance of integrating sustainability principles in the urban design process but also demonstrates their application to the development of sustainable cities As such the book offers essential information and a source of inspiration for all those who want to build more sustainable cities

Hamin Infield, Yaser Abunnasr, Robert L. Ryan, 2018-09-18 This book provides an overview of the large and interdisciplinary literature on the substance and process of urban climate change planning and design using the most important articles from the last 15 years to engage readers in understanding problems and finding solutions to this increasingly critical issue The Reader's particular focus is how the impacts of climate change can be addressed in urban and suburban environments what actions can be taken as well as the need for and the process of climate planning Both reducing greenhouse gas emissions as well as adapting to future climate are explored Many of the emerging best practices in this field involve improving the green infrastructure of the city and region providing better on site stormwater management more urban greening to address excess heat zoning for regional patterns of open space and public transportation corridors and similar actions These actions may also improve current public health and livability in cities bringing benefits now and into the future This Reader is innovative in bringing climate adaptation and green infrastructure together encouraging a more hopeful perspective on the great challenge of climate change by exploring both the problems of climate change and local solutions OECD Regional Development Studies A Territorial Approach to Climate Action and Resilience OECD, 2023-12-06 Building on broader OECD work on climate this report proposes a new OECD territorial climate indicator framework and demonstrates that the potential to mitigate greenhouse gas emissions adapt to climate impacts and address vulnerabilities vary across different territories by using a new OECD territorial climate indicator framework Climate Change in Cities Sara Hughes, Eric K. Chu, Susan G. Mason, 2017-09-27 This book presents pioneering work on a range of innovative practices experiments and ideas that are becoming an integral part of urban climate change governance in the 21st century Theoretically the book builds on nearly two decades of scholarships identifying the emergence of new urban actors spaces and political dynamics in response to climate change priorities However it further articulates and applies the concepts associated with urban climate change governance by bridging formerly disparate disciplines and approaches Empirically the chapters investigate new multi level urban governance arrangements from around the world and leverage the insights they provide for both theory and practice Cities both as political and material entities are increasingly playing a critical role in shaping the trajectory and impacts of climate change action However their policy planning and governance responses to climate change are fraught with tension and contradictions While on one hand local actors play a central role in designing institutions infrastructures and behaviors that drive decarbonization and adaptation to changing climatic conditions their options and incentives are inextricably enmeshed within broader political and economic processes Resolving these tensions and contradictions is likely to require innovative and multi level approaches to governing climate change in the city new interactions new political actors new ways of coordinating and mobilizing resources and new frameworks and technical capacities for decision making We focus explicitly on those innovations that produce new relationships between levels of government between government and citizens and among governments the private sector and transnational and civil society actors A more comprehensive understanding is needed of the innovative approaches being used to navigate the complex networks and relationships that constitute contemporary multi level urban climate change governance Debra Roberts Co Chair Working Group II IPCC 6th Assessment Report AR6 and Acting Head Sustainable and Resilient City Initiatives Durban South Africa Climate Change in Cities offers a refreshingly frank view of how complex cities and city processes really are Christopher Gore Associate Professor and Chair Department of Politics and Public Administration Ryerson University Canada This book is a rare and welcome contribution engaging critically with questions about cities as central actors in multilevel climate governance but it does so recognizing that there are lessons from cities in both the Global North and South Harriet Bulkeley Professor of Geography Durham University United Kingdom This timely collection provides new insights into how cities can put their rhetoric into action on the ground and explores just how this promise can be realised in cities across the world from California to Canada India to Indonesia

Local Action on Climate Change Susie Moloney, Hartmut Fünfgeld, Mikael Granberg, 2017-08-31 There is growing interest in analysing the role and effectiveness of the local scale in responding to the global challenge of climate change However while accounts of urban climate change governance are growing there is now a real need for further conceptual and empirical work to better understand processes of change and uptake across a range of climate change actions Local Action on Climate Change examines how local climate change responses are emerging being operationalized and evaluated within a range of geographical and socio political contexts across the globe Focussing on the role and potential of local governments non government organisations and community groups in driving transformative change the authors analyse how local climate change responses have emerged and explore the extent to which they are or have the potential to be innovative or transformative in terms of governance policy and practice change Drawing on a diverse range of case studies including examples from Vanuatu Japan South Africa Australia Sweden the USA and India this volume will be of great interest to students and scholars of climate change environmental policy and governance and sustainability

Local Climate Change Law Benjamin J. Richardson, 2012-01-01 This book is a useful addition to our literature on climate change law with its focus on climate change at the local level It examines how local governments municipalities and city authorities address climate change through law and policy and the problems constraints faced in mitigation and adaptation at the local level The 15 contributors have thoughtfully and critically analysed the issues from intellectual as well as practical perspectives drawing on the experiences of North America as well as the EU China Australia and South Africa The reader is left with deeper insights and suggestions for the way forward Irene Lin Heng Lye National University of Singapore This volume offers a thorough exploration of the challenges and opportunities for local governments in many parts of the world to mitigate and adapt to climate change Laura Watchmann LEED AP ND Executive
