targeted consumer campaigns and examines children's changing perceptions of what commodities they need to be valued and value themselves. In this critique of America's consumption-based society, author Jennifer Hill chronicles the impact of consumer culture on children from the evolution of childhood play to a child's self-perception as a consumer to the consequences of this generation's repeated media exposure to violence. Hill proposes that corporations eager to tap into a multibillion-dollar market use the power of advertising and the media to mold children's thoughts and behaviors. The book features vignettes with teenagers explaining in their own words how advertising determines their needs, wants, and self-esteem. An in-depth analysis of this research reveals the influence of media on a young person's desire to conform, shows how broadcasted depictions of beauty distort the identities of children and teens, and uncovers corporate agendas for manipulating behavior in the younger generation. The work concludes with the position that corporations are shaping children to be efficient consumers but in return are harming their developing young minds and physical well-being.

Childhood and Consumer Culture D. Buckingham, V. Tingstad, 2010-08-11 In recent years, children have become an increasingly important consumer market, and there is growing concern about the commercialisation of childhood. This book sheds light on these debates, offering new empirical data and challenging critical perspectives on children's engagement with consumer culture from a wide range of international settings.

Sacred Consumption Peter Munday, 2023-04-04 How does consumerism function as a quasi-religion in America, and how does the Christian faith interact with the consumerist pseudo-faith? Answering these questions is the focus of Sacred Consumption: The Religions of Christianity and Consumerism in America. Peter Munday draws on both quantitative and qualitative data to explore how habitually consuming nonessentials is sacred in American culture and how the Christian sacred interacts with such consumption. Munday unpacks the history of American consumerism and the creeds of consumerism. Christian creeds related to both consuming and financial giving are also discussed, illuminating the ways that Christianity can fuel, resist, and passively ignore consumerism. Munday's emphasis throughout is to enumerate the underlying cultural ideology derived from both Christianity and consumerism that partially makes and shapes American consumers.

Childhood by Design Megan Brandow-Faller, 2018-04-19 Informed by the analytical practices of the interdisciplinary material turn and social historical studies of childhood, Childhood By Design: Toys and the Material Culture of Childhood offers new approaches to the material world of childhood and design culture for children. This volume situates toys and design culture for children within broader narratives on history, art, design, and the decorative arts, where toy design has traditionally been viewed as an aberration from more serious pursuits. The essays included treat toys not merely as unproblematic reflections of socio-cultural constructions of childhood but consider how design culture actively shaped, commodified, and materialized shifting discursive constellations surrounding childhood and children. Focusing on the new array of material objects designed in response to the modern invention of childhood, what we might refer to as objects for a childhood by design, Childhood by Design explores dynamic tensions between theory and practice discursive constructions and lived experience as embodied in the material culture of childhood Contributions from and between a variety of disciplinary perspectives including history art history material cultural studies decorative arts design history and childhood studies are represented critically linking historical discourses of childhood with close study of material objects and design culture Chronologically the volume spans the 18th century which witnessed the invention of the toy as an educational plaything and a proliferation of new material artifacts designed expressly for children s use through the 19th century expansion of factory based methods of toy production facilitating accuracy in miniaturization and a new vocabulary of design objects coinciding with the recognition of childhood innocence and physical separation within the household towards the intersection of early 20th century child centered pedagogy and modernist approaches to nursery and furniture design through the changing consumption and sales practices of the postwar period marketing directly to children through television film and other digital media and into the present where the line between the material culture of childhood and adulthood is increasingly blurred The ^AOxford Handbook of Consumption Dr. Frederick F. Wherry, Dr. Ian Woodward, 2019-09-09 The Oxford Handbook of Consumption examines the most pressing questions addressed by consumption studies scholars today The volume counteracts the tendency towards disciplinary myopia as it engages scholars from around the world drawing on sociology anthropology psychology history and consumption studies The volume s thirty one chapters are organized around six themes facilitating cross disciplinary exploration The End of Children? Graham Allan, Nathanael Thomas Lauster, 2012 Fertility rates have fallen dramatically around the world In some countries there are no longer enough children being born to replace adult populations The disappearance of children is a matter of concern matched only by fears that childhood is becoming too structured or not structured enough too short or too long or just simply too different from the idealized childhoods of the past Children, Media and Playground Cultures R. Willett, C. Richards, J. Marsh, A. Burn, J. The Oxford Handbook of the Archaeology of the Contemporary World Paul Graves-Brown, Rodney Harrison, Angela Piccini, 2013-10-17 It has been clear for many years that the ways in which archaeology is practised have been a direct product of a particular set of social cultural and historical circumstances archaeology is always carried out in the present More recently however many have begun to consider how archaeological techniques might be used to reflect more directly on the contemporary world itself how we might undertake archaeologies of as well as in the present This Handbook is the first comprehensive survey of an exciting and rapidly expanding sub field and provides an authoritative overview of the newly emerging focus on the archaeology of the present and recent past In addition to detailed archaeological case studies it includes essays by scholars working on the relationships of different disciplines to the archaeology of the contemporary world including anthropology psychology philosophy historical geography science and technology studies communications and media ethnoarchaeology forensic archaeology sociology film performance and contemporary art This volume seeks to explore the boundaries of an emerging sub discipline to develop a tool kit of concepts and methods which are applicable to this new field and to suggest important future trajectories for research It makes a significant intervention by drawing together scholars working on a broad range of themes approaches methods and case studies from diverse contexts in different parts of the world which have not previously been considered collectively

Early Childhood Education in the United States Dinah Volk, Liz Brooker, Pamela Oberhuemer, Rod Parker-Rees, 2020-04-24 Early Childhood Education in the United States is rife with contradictions critique and innovation It is a time when a status quo characterized by systemic historic discrimination teacher de professionalization teaching to the test and attacks on funding is challenged by new technologies new literacies and transformative and critical perspectives and practices that defy assumptions and biases to create cutting edge diverse instantiations of Early Childhood Education for children families and teachers This volume based on a special issue of the Early Years journal written in 2016 before the new administration announced its policies aims to generate conversations about developments in Early Childhood Education situated within classist racist linguistic and neoliberal contexts and to analyze critically where we are where we might go and what we might do It is also an opportunity to share counter narratives to the dominant narratives promulgated by many convinced that narrow destructive norms of appropriate practice standards and accountability as well as the curtailed achievement of children of Color those from low income communities and emergent bilinguals are common sense These counter narratives some about transformational projects that have generated innovative perspectives and practices and some detailing critical analyses and projects that go beyond to explore issues of power contest education that disprivileges some children and families while advocating education that is child and family centered culturally relevant and sustaining equitable and democratic Our hope is that this work creates a space of dialogue and human action needed even more urgently today This book was originally published as a special issue of the Early Years journal

Tween Girls' Dressing and Young Femininity in Singapore Bernice Loh, 2022-04-19 This book provides an insight into girls cultural identities and young femininities through an understanding of tween girls dressing in Singapore The book adopts a girl centred approach to shed light on the narratives and experiences of young Singaporean girls that have often been overlooked It draws on the conversations with young Singaporean girls aged 8 to 12 to understand how they wanted to dress from where they gained their inspiration and what the social factors were that influenced their dressing Through understanding how girls want to fashion themselves the book shows that it is imprecise to discuss issues based on the assumption that there is one dominant correct way to grow up as a young person in Singapore This book unpacks how young Singaporean girls negotiate their cultural identities through clothing that do not simply conform to or reflect their roles as students It also shows how girlhood in Singapore is multi faceted and the values and meanings that tween girls attach to their dressing intersect at the personal social and cultural level The book offers new ways of approaching and looking at girls adult like dressing that move beyond the discourse of sexualisation In establishing a space for young Singaporean girls voices in an area that has been dominated by studies from the West this book also shows how the focus on tween girls in Asia can contribute to and advance the current state of girls studies
