Marine Ecotourism Issues And Experiences Aspects Of Tourism:

Marine Ecotourism Brian Garrod, Julie Wilson, 2003-01-03 Marine ecotourism is a major growth area within ecotourism itself a rapidly expanding area within tourism as a whole The activity has been attracting increasing attention both from the popular media and from professionals and academics with an interest in tourism s potential to contribute to sustainable development However there is a growing consensus that far too often the term has been used merely as a tool for capitalising on the good intentions of tourists without the industry itself having to make fundamental changes to their products or to the way they go about their operations This has often been to the detriment of local environments economies and host communities Yet the ideal of ecotourism as it is properly understood is to present local communities with a sustainable development alternative one that works to the benefit of local ecosystems local economies and local people The purpose of the first section of this book is therefore to introduce the concept of marine ecotourism and to draw out some of the key issues involved in ensuring that marine ecotourism is developed in a genuinely sustainable manner The second section then discusses some practical experiences of planning and managing marine ecotourism from around the world identifying common problems and discussing what might constitute good practice in addressing those problems Aspects of Tourism, 7, 2003

Tourism in Marine Environments, 2009 Sharks: Conservation, Governance and Management Erika J. Techera, Natalie Klein, 2014-06-05 The key aim of this book is to explore the global conservation and management of sharks There has been a rapid decline in populations of many shark species while new science has emerged of the critical role they play in marine ecosystems However the authors show that conservation law and policy have been slow to develop with only a small number of iconic species being protected worldwide The increase in fishing impact primarily through shark finning and by catch has led to shark conservation receiving greater international attention in recent years The book explores our current knowledge and status of the law and science in relation to sharks with a particular focus on improving frameworks for their conservation and management Recent trends are analysed including shark finning bans that have been put in place in several countries the widening number of nations establishing shark sanctuaries and the growth of shark based tourism The efficacy of current listing processes for endangered species and fisheries regulations is also examined Tourism is explored as an alternative to fishing and the risks and impacts associated with this industry are analysed Contributors include leading authorities from universities and conservation organizations in North America Europe and Australia A common theme is to emphasise the importance of collaborative governance between various interest groups and the need for inter disciplinary research and management approaches that are necessary to address the decline in sharks
