In the wake of tragic terrorist attacks in Western Europe so called parallel communities have come under increased scrutiny and pressure to be engaged and integrated in the politics and society of the country of settlement In this context the tools of intercultural dialogue and citizenship have been proposed to bridge the gap between majority and minority communities Yet how are these concepts understood on the ground This book explores perceptions of citizenship and intercultural dialogue among minority youth in Berlin and London chosen for their contrasting citizenship and immigration policies Germany has a strong ethnic heritage and the presence of a large minority community from Turkey The policies and relationship with the Turkish community have often served to perpetuate cultural and ethnic boundaries their presence overshadowing the numerous other ethnicities living within Germany In the UK the large presence of immigrants of Afro Caribbean and Asian descent often dominates centre stage in a much more territorially defined political context while the needs and demands of smaller communities are not commonly known Nonetheless these smaller communities shape and even offer unique insights into the way that local contexts interact with international and transnational structures It is argued that in both cities minority youths communicated feelings and experiences of marginalization and contestation generally feeling a sense of belonging to their local neighbourhoods but not to broader society The book explores the process of valuation the idea that a value is put on an immigrant according to their desirability or undesirability based on ethnicity or skills Furthermore it assesses the role of education as a mediator between state and society By arguing that local engagement has international ramifications and highlighting the importance of the role of youth in international politics this book offers a new perspective on International
