Quiere ampliar sus conocimientos en el campo de las redes informáticas. Quieres conocer el futuro de las redes. Te has preguntado alguna vez cómo funciona Internet. Si es así, sigue leyendo. Las redes de computadoras pueden definirse como la tecnología que hace posible la comunicación entre diferentes sistemas o dispositivos informáticos esparcidos por todo el mundo. Las redes informáticas también pueden considerarse como una subparte de las telecomunicaciones, la informática, la tecnología de la información y la ingeniería informática, ya que utilizan una tecnología que depende en gran medida de las diversas aplicaciones de estas corrientes científicas y de ingeniería. Basándose en el área de la comunicación y en la capacidad de atender las necesidades específicas de determinadas multitudes, las redes informáticas pueden dividirse en tres grandes divisiones. Estas son Internet, Intranet, Extranet. Existen dos métodos para facilitar la creación de una red entre diferentes dispositivos informáticos: la conexión por cable y las conexiones inalámbricas. Con tantas facilidades de ritmo rápido y la conveniente interfaz entre los usuarios y los dispositivos, es virtualmente imposible llevar a cabo nuestras tareas sin el concepto de red informática. Hay muchas cosas para las que usamos las redes informáticas en nuestra vida. Algunas de ellas son: El principal objetivo de las redes informáticas es, por supuesto, hacer posible el intercambio de recursos y datos en todo el mundo en una pequeña cantidad de tiempo. Esta estructura se adapta perfectamente al mundo empresarial, en el que las funciones de red son supervisadas por un administrador central y todas las demás computadoras conectadas a ella se denominan clientes, tal como las utilizan los empleados de la empresa. Promoción de las plataformas de comercio electrónico. Aparte de esto, el trabajo en red también juega un papel importante en nuestras actividades diarias: Entretenimiento interactivo, Información remota de fácil acceso, Comunicación de persona a persona. Se dice que todo conjunto de computadoras o dispositivos que están interconectados entre sí y albergan la capacidad de intercambiar datos entre sí forman parte de una red informática. En el mundo actual, vemos un cambio gradual de las tecnologías tradicionales a un mundo que pronto será dominado por la Tecnología de la Información. Como las redes informáticas están en el centro del sector de la tecnología de la información, debemos tener un firme control sobre el tema para ser compatibles con el lento cambio a un mundo con prioridades diferentes. El objetivo del libro es simple: Ayuda a las masas a educarse sobre los aspectos básicos y otros aspectos avanzados de las redes informáticas de la manera más simple posible. En este libro también aprenderemos: Tecnología inalámbrica e inalámbrica, Aplicaciones de la tecnología inalámbrica, Protocolos de red, Redes inalámbricas móviles.
