

923-1001 AD The Vikings

The Vikings were the great raiders, traders, explorers, and settlers of medieval Europe. From their base in Scandinavia, they established outposts in the British Isles, Iceland, Ireland, Greenland, France, the Mediterranean, and Russia. They were probably also the first people from Europe to set foot in North America—almost 500 years before the arrival of Christopher Columbus.

"Never before has such terror appeared in Britain."

Viking longships

The Vikings used superbly designed boats called "longships" to raid and explore. Powered by oar and sail, these boats had shallow bottoms and could be sailed for inland on rivers and lakes. They had the added advantage of being light enough to drag over land to another lake or river.
