1913 doubts vanished when I thought upon Fabre's own words in the first chapter of this book If I write for men of learning for philosophers I write above all things for the young I want to make them love the natural story which you make them hate and that is why while keeping strictly to the domain of truth I avoid your scientific prose which too often alas seems borrowed from some Iroquois idiom We are delighted to publish this classic book as part of our extensive Classic Library collection Many of the books in our collection have been out of print for decades and therefore have not been accessible to the general public The aim of our publishing program is to facilitate rapid access to this vast reservoir of literature and our view is that this is a significant literary work which deserves to be brought back into print after many decades The contents of the vast majority of titles in the Classic Library have been scanned from the original works To ensure a high quality product each title has been meticulously hand curated by our staff Our philosophy has been guided by a desire to provide the reader with a book that is as close as possible to ownership of the original work We hope that you will enjoy this wonderful classic work and that for you it becomes an enriching experience The Life of the Fly J. Henri Fabre, 2018-03-24 The Life of the Fly from Jean Henri Fabre French entomologist and author 1823-1915 A fascinating loving look at insect natural history and biology by a passionate reclusive amateur with a compulsively readable style The author wrote in the late 1800s and was only discovered late in his life His works remain justly popular The Life of the Fly; with Which Are Interspersed Some Chapters of Autobiography Jean-Henri Fabre, 2021-08-30 The Life of the Fly With Which are Interspersed Some Chapters of Autobiography Jean Henri Fabre The Life of the Fly J. Henri Fabre, 2006 1925 The essential genius of this eminent French scientist Fabre lies in his ability to humanize a great phase of Nature that has long been a sealed book to the layman The insect world to all but the scientist has always seemed unimportant uninteresting and hitherto hidden in a maze of technical expressions and technical thought But with the advent of Fabre another sun has risen to light up this little known branch of human knowledge and human interest See other titles by this author available from Kessinger Publishing The life of Jean Henri Fabre, the entomologist, 1823-1910 Augustin Fabre, 2025-03-02 In The Life of Jean Henri Fabre the Entomologist 1823-1910 Augustin Fabre intricately weaves a narrative that not only chronicles the life of his illustrious father Jean Henri Fabre but also situates his contributions within the broader context of entomology and natural history Written with a blend of biographical detail and scientific exploration the text is both informative and eloquent showcasing Fabre's innovative observational methods and profound impact on the scientific community The literary style reflects a deep reverence for nature and meticulous attention to detail making it an invaluable resource for understanding late 19th century scientific thought and its intersection with personal narrative Augustin Fabre himself an author and historian is profoundly influenced by his father's legacy which has shaped his own understanding of nature and science. The dedication and passion of Jean Henri Fabre who famously documented the behaviors and lives of insects serve as a powerful backdrop for Augustin's reflections. This familial connection enriches the narrative providing readers not only with biographical facts but also with insights into the motivations and trials faced by a pioneering entomologist in a rapidly evolving scientific landscape. I highly recommend this book to anyone interested in natural history biography or the intricacies of scientific exploration. Augustin Fabre's work is an essential tribute to an iconic figure in the entomology field revealing the struggles and triumphs that defined Jean Henri Fabre's life. It invites readers to appreciate the beauty and complexity of the natural world through the eyes of one of its greatest advocates.

In a few days time naturalists poets and philosophers will repair in company to S rignan in the neighbourhood of Orange. What is calling them from every point of the intellectual horizon from the most distant cities and capitals to a little Provençal village Moussu Fabr they would tell you yonder in a tone of respectful sympathy. But who is the Moussu Fabr thus cherished by the simplest as well as by the most cultivated minds? He is a sturdy old man of all but ninety years who has spent almost the whole of his life in the company of Wasps Bees Gnats Beetles Spiders and Ants and has described the doings of these tiny creatures in a most wonderful fashion in ten large volumes entitled Souvenirs Entomologiques or Etudes sur l'Instinct et les Mœurs des Insectes. One might say of this achievement what the author of Lettres Persanes said of his book Proles sine matre. It is a child without a mother. It is in short unprecedented. It has not its fellow either in the Machal of Solomon or the apologues of the old fabulists or the treatises on natural history written by our modern scientists. The fabulists look to find man in the animal which for them is little more than a pretext for comparisons and moral narratives and the scientists commonly confine their curiosity to the dissection of the insect's organs the analysis of its functions and the classification of species. We might even say that the insect is the least of their cares for like Solomon they delight in holding forth upon all the creatures upon the earth or in the heavens above and all the plants from the cedar tree that is in Lebanon even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall 1 Kings iv 32-33. Fabre on the contrary has eyes only for the insect. He observes it by and for itself in the most trivial manifestations of its life the living active insect with its labours and its habits is the thing that interests him before all else guiding his investigation of the infinite host of these tiny lives which claim his attention on every hand and in this world of insects wealth of artifice and capacities of the mental order seem to be in an inverse ratio to beauty of form and brilliance of colour. For this reason Fabre learns to disdain the magnificent Butterfly applying himself by preference to the modest Fly the two winged Flies which are relatives of our common House fly or the four winged Flies the numerous and infinitely various cousins of the Wasps and Bees the Spiders ugly indeed but such skilful spinners and even the Dung beetles and Scarab id of every species those wonderful agents of terrestrial purification. In this singular world which affords him the society which he prefers he has gathered an ample harvest of unexpected facts and highly perplexing actions on the part of these little so called inferior animals No one has excelled him in detecting their slightest movements and in surprising all the secrets of their lives Darwin declared and many others have repeated his words that Fabre was an incomparable observer The verdict is all the more significant in that the French entomologist did not scruple to oppose his observations to the theories of the famous English naturalist The Life of the Fly Jean-Henri Fabre,1913 The present volume contains all the essays on flies or Diptera from the Souvenirs entomologiques to which I have added in order to make the dimensions uniform with those of the other volumes of the series the purely autobiographical essays comprised in the Souvenirs Translator s note Home Progress ,1913 The Life of the Fly; With Which are Interspersed Some Chapters of Autobiography Jean-Henri Fabre,2025-09-01 Reproduction of the original The Antigonos publishing house specialises in the publication of reprints of historical books We make sure that these works are made available to the public in good condition in order to preserve their cultural heritage Children's Reading Lewis Madison Terman,Margaret Lima,1925 Among Our Books Carnegie Library of Pittsburgh,1915 A Seven Year Cycle Reading Plan C.S. V. Hudson,2019-12-18 In An Elementary Manual of New Zealand Entomology G V Hudson offers a comprehensive exploration of the rich diversity of insect life in New Zealand The book is intricately structured presenting detailed descriptions and classifications of various insect species found within the archipelago complemented by Hudson s own meticulous observations Written in a clear accessible style this manual not only serves as an educational resource for novices in entomology but also stands as a valuable contribution to the scientific literature of the time reflecting the burgeoning interest in natural sciences during the early 20th century Hudson s illustrative plates enhance the text enabling readers to visualize the intricacies of the specimens discussed thereby bridging the gap between theoretical knowledge and practical identification skills G V Hudson a self taught naturalist and prolific writer devoted his life to the study of New Zealand s flora and fauna His passion for entomology was likely shaped by his experiences exploring the unique ecosystems of the region Hudson s work faced the challenge of bringing attention to New Zealand s native species at a time when many unrecognized threats loomed over the local biodiversity fostering a lifelong commitment to the documentation and conservation of these insects This manual is highly recommended for both amateur entomologists and seasoned biologists Hudson s engaging prose paired with his keen observation transforms a field guide into a compelling narrative that invites readers to appreciate the wonders of New Zealand's insect life Delve into this essential work to uncover the intricate relationships between these species and their habitats and deepen your understanding of the vital ecological roles they play
