Checking the cut-off valve on the stabilisation module

L544 - 443 / from 7477; L554 - 453 / from 7477

The cut-off valve limits the pressure in the hydro accumulators when ride control is switched off. The following steps describe how to check the cut-off pressure.

Procedure

- Attach the pressure gauge (600 bar) on the stabilisation module to the test connection MX.
- Start the diesel engine (switch off ride control).
- At idling speed, raise the lift arm to its full extent and build up pressure.
- Check whether the high pressure on the pressure gauge corresponds to the required value (using the highest value).
- If the required value is not reached:
Turn the adjusting screw 1 on the cut-off valve until it is reached.

To test the cut-off valve again, the pressure at the measuring connection MX must be decreased below 100 bar.

To do this, lower the pressure in the ride control system as described in the section on depressurising the ride control and hydro accumulator.

- As a final test, check the cut-off pressure again.
