knowledge alive and relevant      The Life of Gen. Garibaldi, Written by Himself Giuseppe Garibaldi,1859      The Life of Garibaldi Theodore Dwight,2017-04-10 In commencing an account of my life it would be unpardonable in me to omit speaking of my kind parents My father a sailor and the son of a sailor educated me in the best manner he could in Nice my native city and afterwards trained me to the life of a seaman in a vessel with himself He had navigated vessels of his own in his youth but a change of fortune had compelled him afterwards to serve in those belonging to his father He used often to tell his children that he would gladly have left them richer but I am fully convinced that the course which he adopted in our education was the best he possibly could have taken and that he procured for us the best instructors he was able perhaps sometimes at the expense of his own convenience If therefore I was not trained in a gymnasium it was by no means owing to his want of desire In mentioning my mother I speak it with pride she was a model for mothers and in saying this I have said all that can be said One of the greatest sorrows of my life is that I am not able to brighten the last days of my good parent whose path I have strewn with so many sorrows by my adventurous career Her tender affection for me has perhaps been excessive but do I not owe to her love to her angel like character the little good that belongs to mine To the piety of my mother to her beneficent and charitable nature do I not perhaps owe that little love of country which has gained for me the sympathy and affection of my good but unfortunate fellow citizens Although certainly not superstitious often amidst the most arduous scenes of my tumultuous life when I have passed unharmed through the breakers of the ocean or the hail storms of battle she has seemed present with me I have in fancy seen her on her knees before the Most High my dear mother imploring for the life of her son and I have believed in the efficacy of her prayers
