Managing Protected Areas in Central and Eastern Europe Under Climate Change Sven Rannow, Marco Neubert, 2014-01-18 Beginning with an overview of data and concepts developed in the EU project HABIT CHANGE this book addresses the need for sharing knowledge and experience in the field of biodiversity conservation and climate change There is an urgent need to build capacity in protected areas to monitor assess manage and report the effects of climate change and their interaction with other pressures The contributors identify barriers to the adaptation of conservation management such as the mismatch between planning reality and the decision context at site level Short and vivid descriptions of case studies drawn from investigation areas all over Central and Eastern Europe illustrate both the local impacts of climate change and their consequences for future management These focus on ecosystems most vulnerable to changes in climatic conditions including alpine areas wetlands forests lowland grasslands and coastal areas The case studies demonstrate the application of adaptation strategies in protected areas like National Parks Biosphere Reserves and Natural Parks and reflect the potential benefits as well as existing obstacles A general section provides the necessary background information on climate trends and their effects on abiotic and biotic components Often the parties to policy change and conservation management including managers land users and stakeholders lack both expertise and incentives to undertake adaptation activities The authors recognise that achieving the needed changes in behavior habit is as much a social learning process as a matter of science based procedure They describe the implementation of modeling impact assessment and monitoring of climate conditions and show how the results can support efforts to increase stakeholder involvement in local adaptation strategies The book concludes by pointing out the need for more work to communicate the cross sectoral nature of biodiversity protection the value of well informed planning in the long term process of adaptation the definition of acceptable change and the motivational value of exchanging experience and examples of good practice
