LIFE ON THE BORDER

It's where Elfand
meets rock and roll.

Illustrated by Peter Dinklage

Created and edited by four-time World Fantasy Award winner

TERRI WINDLING

• Dateline BORDERTOWN (Global News Service) — Like the runaways of so many previous generations, the youngsters who flock to Bordertown are lured by the glamor of the place. Much of this glamor is associated with the exotic segment of the local population whose origins lie on the other side of the Border. Tall, pale, with distinctive silver-white hair, they call themselves "Truebloods." Everyone else calls them gits.

• A complex mercantile city with a rough frontier edge, Bordertown has dealt with its human and elvin runaway youth by giving them an entire section of the old city. Called Soho, it is policed by gangs of teenagers — some of whom promote interspecies hatred, some of whom fight for their own streetwise brand of tolerance and understanding.

• What's startling about Soho is that in spite of gang violence and destitution, there's hope here as well as despair. The youth of Bordertown have their own street culture, music scene, and unique attitude... full of energy and life and, yes, a bit of magic. Life on the Border isn't for the starry-eyed or the faint of heart — but for these kids, survival has become an art of its own.

"A fresh, lively interpretation of the exciting fantasy concept of a netherworld on the edge of time." — BOOKLIST on BORDERTOWN
