Inventing A School Expanding The Boundaries Of Learning:

Inventing a School Jane Kern,1999 Creating the Suburban School Advantage John L. Rury,2020-04-15 Creating the Suburban School Advantage explains how American suburban school districts gained a competitive edge over their urban counterparts John L Rury provides a national overview of the process focusing on the period between 1950 and 1980 and presents a detailed study of metropolitan Kansas City a region representative of trends elsewhere While big city districts once were widely seen as superior and attracted families seeking the best educational opportunities for their children suburban school systems grew rapidly in the post World War II era as middle class and more affluent families moved to those communities As Rury relates at the same time economically dislocated African Americans migrated from the South to center city neighborhoods testing the capacity of urban institutions As demographic trends drove this urban suburban divide a suburban ethos of localism contributed to the socioeconomic exclusion that became a hallmark of outlying school systems School districts located wholly or partly within the municipal boundaries of Kansas City Missouri make for revealing cases that illuminate our understanding of these national patterns As Rury demonstrates struggles to achieve greater educational equity and desegregation in urban centers contributed to so called white flight and what Senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan considered to be a crisis of urban education in 1965 Despite the often valiant efforts made to serve inner city children and bolster urban school districts this exodus Rury cogently argues created a new metropolitan educational hierarchy a mirror image of the urban centric model that had prevailed before World War II The stubborn perception that suburban schools are superior based on test scores and budgets has persisted into the twenty first century and instantiates today s metropolitan landscape of social economic and educational inequality Rethinking Equity - Creating a Great School for All J-C Couture, PhD,Stephen Murgatroyd, PhD FBPsS FRSA,2013-09-23 Understanding educational success of Alberta or Finland needs to include an awareness of socio cultural political and economic factors issues covered in several chapters of this book Indeed education policies that drive better equity and equality in these systems must be kept at the center of attention when considering any lessons from these high performing school systems Finland has shown just like Alberta that educational change should be systematic and coherent in contrast with the current haphazard intervention efforts of many other countries my own conclusion is that developing the capacities of schools through interventions like AISI Alberta Initiative for School Improvement in Alberta and school led curriculum system in Finland is much more important than testing the hell out of students and that some out of school policies and support mechanisms to families and children associated with health well being and happiness are also necess Twelve Roles of Facilitators for School Change R.
