likely consequences of the Iran nuclear deal on this prospect which in turn raises the issue of regional proliferation and counterproliferation The last section explores some possible various scenarios and the challenges of implementation as a relatively long term agreement providing specific policy recommendations for the regional actors and the external powers that are stakeholders in the volatile Middle East

Trump and Iran Nader Entessar, Kaveh L. Afrasiabi, 2019-11-20 With the advent of the Trump Administration relations between Iran and the United States have become increasingly conflictual to the point that a future war between the two countries is a realistic possibility President Trump has unilaterally withdrawn the US from the historic Iran nuclear accord and has re imposed the nuclear related sanctions which had been removed as a result of that accord Reflecting a new determined US effort to curb Iran's hegemonic behavior throughout the Middle East Trump's Iran policy has all the markings of a sharp discontinuity in the Iran containment strategy of the previous six US administrations The regime change policy spearheaded by a hawkish cabinet with a long history of antipathy toward the Iranian government has become the most salient feature of US policy toward Iran under President Trump This turn in US foreign policy has important consequences not just for Iran but also for Iran's neighbors and prospects of long term stability in the Persian Gulf and beyond This book seeks to examine the fluid dynamic of US Iran relations in the Trump era by providing a social scientific understanding of the pattern of hostility and antagonism between Washington and Tehran and the resulting spiraling conflict that may lead to a disastrous war in the region

Kerr, Mary Beth Dunham Nikitin, 2015 In the early hours of November 24, 2013, in Geneva, Iran and the six powers that have negotiated with Iran about its nuclear program since 2006, the United States, Britain, France, Russia, China, and Germany collectively known as the P5+1, finalized an interim agreement requiring Iran to freeze many aspects of its nuclear program in exchange for what the Obama Administration calls limited temporary targeted and reversible relief from international sanctions The period of the interim deal is to be six months during which time Iran and the P5+1 will attempt to reach a comprehensive deal on the long-term status of Iran's nuclear program Regional and international governments are closely watching the negotiations Some U.S. allies as well as some in Congress assert a concern that the P5+1 might accept an accord that does not ensure that Iran could not utilize its nuclear infrastructure to develop a nuclear weapon in a short period of time Some countries in the region including the Persian Gulf monarchies express concern that a final accord would prompt a broader U.S.-Iran rapprochement that could cause the United States to retreat from the Middle East Others assert that a final accord would give Iran additional resources to extend its influence in the region On the other hand an accord could produce greater U S Iran cooperation against the threat to the region posed by the Islamic State organization s seizure of territory in Iraq and Syria U S officials acknowledge that Iran and the United States have held bilateral talks on the Islamic State and other regional issues at the margins of the negotiations on a comprehensive nuclear accord Preliminary page Iran

Congressional Research Service,2014-11-26 On November 24 2013 Iran and the six powers that have negotiated with Iran about its nuclear program since 2006 the United States Britain France Russia China and Germany collectively known as the P5 1 finalized an interim agreement Joint Plan of Action JPA requiring Iran to freeze many aspects of its nuclear program in exchange for relief from some international sanctions The period of the interim deal was to be six months during which time Iran and the P5 1 would attempt to reach a comprehensive deal on the long term status of Iran s nuclear program The main elements of the JPA is a requirement that Iran freeze in effect its production of enriched uranium containing up to 5% uranium 235 during this period by converting the material to a uranium compound unsuitable for further enrichment refrain from producing enriched uranium hexafluoride containing 20% uranium 235 the form of enriched uranium in Iran s stockpile that has caused the most concern halt key elements of its heavy water reactor and uranium enrichment facilities and provide the International Atomic Energy Agency IAEA with additional information about its nuclear program as well as access to some nuclear related facilities which are not covered by Iran s IAEA safeguards agreement Under the JPA the P5 1 countries agreed to refrain from imposing new sanctions and permit Iran to repatriate to Iran about 700 million per month in oil sales proceeds Iran s oil exports are capped at about 1 million barrels per day a 60% drop from 2011 levels of about 2.5 million barrels per day The JPA also permits Iran to sell petrochemicals and trade in gold and other precious metals and to conduct transactions with foreign firms involved in Iran s auto sector The estimated value of the revenue that accrues to Iran from these sources is about 250 million per month Iran also is permitted to access about 65 million per month of hard currency for tuition for Iranian students to buy spare parts for U S made civilian aircraft and to receive international facilitation of humanitarian purchases of food and medicine The JPA has been seen as halting Iran s ability to produce a nuclear weapon and improving the international community s ability to identify Iranian efforts to develop nuclear weapons Throughout 2014 the attention of the international community increasingly turned to the potential outcome of negotiations on a comprehensive nuclear accord The P5 1 Iran negotiations began in February 2014 and reportedly made steady progress although insufficient to reach agreement by the July 20 expiration of the first six month JPA period In July the two sides announced that progress and Iran s compliance with the JPA provisions justified extending the JPA until November 24 2014 Intensive negotiations attempted to finalize a deal by that deadline but the two sides again announced that more time was needed to close still significant gaps in their positions The main outstanding issues reportedly center on the size and scope of Iran's uranium enrichment program the duration of the comprehensive accord and the extent and sequencing of the lifting of nuclear related sanctions On November 24 Iran and the P5+1 announced that they were extending the talks and all provisions of the JPA with the intent of finalizing a detailed agreement by June 30 2015 The parties stated they would first attempt to reach an overarching framework for the agreement by March 1 2015 The Iran Nuclear Agreement and Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action Benjamin Martinez, 2016 On 14 July 2015 Iran and the six powers that have negotiated with Iran about its nuclear program since 2006 the United States the United Kingdom France Russia China and Germany collectively known as the P5+1 finalised a Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action JCPOA The JCPOA is intended to ensure that Iran's nuclear program can be used for purely peaceful purposes in exchange for a broad lifting of U.S. European Union EU and United Nations U.N. sanctions on Iran The JCPOA largely reflects what was agreed upon on the 2 April 2015 framework for the accord The agreement replaces a Joint Plan of Action JPA interim nuclear accord in operation since January 2014 This book examines the Iran Nuclear Agreement and discusses Tehran's compliance with international obligations Examining Nuclear Negotiations United States.
