Henry Moore: Unpublished Drawings Henry Moore, David Mitchinson, 1972 N the work of every great artist there is an area that his public seldom sees the notes jottings and drawings that contain his finished creations in embryo These preparatory works are of the utmost importance to the study of art history since they are often the key to the evolution of a work of art indicating how a particular artists vision is translated from germinal idea to final form In the case of Henry Moore one of the great sculptors of our time the discovery of more than 200 of his hitherto unpublished drawings is an exciting event not only for its historical significance but for the aesthetic joy the drawings evoke Many of the sketches taken from comprehensive notebooks and sketchbooks dating from 1921 to 1970 will delight the viewer with their independence as finished graphic statements for Moore experimented extensively with ink pencil crayon chalk wash and watercolor alone and in innovative combinations But it is ultimately Moores purpose for these drawings that both fascinates and overwhelms us here are the worksheets of his artistic vision the raw material from which evolved the Mother and Child sculptures the Reclining Figures and the Family Groups Wherever possible the sculptors written notations to the sketches have been included since they afford a still deeper understanding of Moores intense involvement with his subjects David Mitchinsons text adds a historical framework for the drawings relating them to trends in Moores art and to specific finished sculptures thus extending the exploration of Moores creative process so provocatively invited by the drawings themselves
