A Destructive Fire occurred Saturday, June 22, 1867, and for a time threatened to spread destruction by means of blazing sparks to the remotest portions of the village. While the aggregate loss was not as great as in either of the fires of 1856 or 1863, it was a more sensational fire, more difficult to restrain and occasioned greater sorrow, consuming as it did not only the Whitney House (Colton tavern) and barns which then stood on the west side of Main street opposite the village park, making several people homeless, but the Trinity and the Congregational church buildings. The fire broke out at 1:30 p. m. and, by the assistance of a steamer brought from Rome, was subdued late in the afternoon. Women and children ascended to roofs of adjacent buildings to watch for indications of its spreading. Trinity church stood to the north of the hotel and the Congregational church across the street in the park. Brands of fire were carried by the wind to the east and north. The town clock in the steeple of the Congregational church struck 2 just before it toppled over falling to the ground in charred fragments. John C. Owen's dwelling in Second street a quarter of a mile distant, was destroyed, placing the north end of the village in great jeopardy but happily with no further disaster.

Factory Fires.—P. & P. Costello's tannery burned August 16, 1883, when several thousand dollars worth of leather was burned. They rebuilt but soon after sold the property.

Penfield & Stone's grist mill burned Sept. 27, 1882. The present commodious mill stands on the same site.

The Camden Knitting Co.'s plant on the afternoon of March 23, 1893, was mostly destroyed by the fire which started in the Costello tannery building then in use by the Knitting Co. The site was rebuilt with large, modern buildings for the same industry.

Jacob Rush was born in Utica, Oneida county, N. Y., August 20, 1828, and came to this town with his parents when he was three years old. With the exception of one year, about the time he was eighteen years old, when he was in Westchester county, N. Y., he has ever since resided in Camden. In early life he learned the trade of carpenter and joiner which he followed until 1860, when he entered the sash and blind factory and planing mill of Cox & Stone as partner, having bought a one-fourth interest with them. At one time he was associated with G. J. Williams in the same business. In 1881 he bought out his partners and conducted the business alone very successfully for many years. Feeling that old age had begun to weigh rather heavily upon him he sold out to his two sons in 1891, although he has since continued to work at the factory and help the boys all he can. He has always been a republican, voting with that party since its organization and holding different offices in the gift of his townsmen, such as collector, overseer of the poor and assessor for many years, which office he now holds both in the town and in the village. He was the class leader and a member of the official board in the Methodist church for several years, having united with that society in this village in 1856.

Early Academy Teachers.—Linus Sanford was one of the first to teach in the old academy on the park. Then came Thomas Seagar with a select school about 1823-4; Miss Freelove Southworth had a young ladies' select school; Aaron Matthews was a district school teacher; Miss Flora, daughter of Eliakim Stoddard, taught select school and S. S. Sheldon public school. Miss Adeline Pond taught in 1833 and Miss Lettice Blakeslee in 1834. All above mentioned taught in the academy, also including Miss Wealthy Blakeslee, Miss Ruth Warner, Walter and William Jerome and Rosanna and Marion Reynolds.
