Literacy in the Digital University Robin Goodfellow, Mary R. Lea, 2013-10-08

Literacy in the Digital University is an innovative volume bringing together perspectives from two fields of enquiry and practice: literacies and learning and learning technologies. With their own histories and trajectories, these fields have seldom overlapped, either in practice, theory, or research. In tackling this divide head-on, the volume breaks new ground. It illustrates how complementary and contrasting approaches to literacy and technology can be brought together in productive ways and considers the implications of this for practitioners working across a wide range of contexts. The book showcases work from well-respected authorities in the two fields in order to provide the foundations for new conversations about learning and practice in the digital university. It will be of particular relevance to university teachers and researchers, educational developers, and learning technologists, library staff, university managers, and policy makers, and not least learners themselves, particularly those studying at post-graduate level.

The Materiality of Reading Theresa Schilhab, Sue Walker, 2020-09-24

We read e-books and printed books. But are there differences in how and where we read? And what opportunities does a digital reading environment bring for writers and designers? The materiality of reading explores the experience of reading by examining the interaction between the reader and the object of reading. Bringing together an array of disciplinary perspectives, such as neurobiology, embodied reading, and typography, we aim to understand how the materiality of the text enhances reader engagement with digital and physical books. The papers of this anthology are the result of academic discussions and empirical explorations at universities in Zadar, Vilnius, Reading, and Stavanger, as the authors are all members of the European research initiative Evolution of Reading in the Age of Digitisation (E-READ).

Teaching Theology in a Technological Age Doru Costache, James R. Harrison, 2015-11-25

The iGeneration has learned to adapt rapidly to technological change. Tech-savvy students multi-task with consummate ease: accessing email on smart phones, researching assignments on tablets, reading a book on Kindle while drinking a flat white, and listening to iTunes in the background. How does the tertiary educational curriculum meet the learning needs of students whose attention transitions rapidly between mediums and messages? The complexity and pace of modern technological change has left the theological educational sector gasping as it struggles to devise pedagogically engaging online distance learning materials in traditional disciplines and teach units with significant relational and pastoral components. The technological benefits are vast: the instant availability of information unprecedented and the opportunities to provide theological education to groups marginalised by the tyranny of distance and time enormous How should the theological sector address these challenges and opportunities Although the benefits are massive the media is replete with stories of the casualties of technological change including cyber bullying internet predators the psychic damage from trolls addiction to gaming and issues of body image among others How should the theological sector drawing upon its scriptural and teaching heritage come to grips with the deficits spawned by the technological revolution What is the theological pastoral social and pedagogic responsibility of theology teachers in nurturing this new generation Teaching Theology in a Technological Age draws together in an inspiring volume a series of cutting edge essays from Australian New Zealand and South African scholars on the learning and teaching of theology in a digital age
