Marketing Scales Handbook Gordon C. statements as well as information about the scale's origin, previous users and measurement quality. The scales are useful when wanting to accurately measure theoretical constructs such as attitudes, emotions and traits in surveys and experiments with a wide variety of participants such as consumers, viewers, patients, patrons or citizens. Many of the measures could also be used in business settings when studying employees and/or administrators. The scales reviewed in this volume are primarily new and are not in the previous volumes of the series.

A Problem-based Approach for Management Education Philip Hallinger, Edwin M. Bridges, 2007-05-22 A Problem based Approach for Management Education describes the use of problem based learning (PBL) in management education. PBL is an active learning approach first pioneered in medical education but whose use has grown steadily in a variety of professional fields over the past two decades. The authors draw upon their experience in using PBL in a broad array of management education programs at the Bachelor, Master, Doctoral and Executive levels in North America and in Asia. This book is designed to provide both novice and experienced users of PBL with resources for designing and implementing problem based management education. The book provides the novice with useful theoretical and practical background on how to design a PBL curriculum, use PBL in a classroom and develop PBL materials. At the same time, the book will challenge experienced users of PBL and case teaching to extend their applications through the use of learning technologies and more systematic approaches to assessment and curriculum design.

Marketing Scales Handbook Gordon C. Bruner, 2013 Which measurement scales have been used the most in consumer insight research? Dr Bruner, author of the classic Marketing Scales Handbook series, set out to answer that question. After reviewing several thousand multi-item measures used in scholarly research of consumer issues, it was clear that some scales had been used much more than others. Twenty of those are the focus of the book. Not only do these top 20 indicate what is popular with marketing scholars but it provides details about how to precisely measure some of the most important psychological constructs that shape consumer behavior. This book is meant for researchers in a variety of fields who are interested in reliable measures for use in surveys and experiments. Instead of using simplistic measures of dubious quality or, at the other extreme, having to build and refine measures from scratch, researchers can use the book to learn from the experts who have already crafted quality measures. By using better scales, accuracy is increased, which thereby improves the results of analyses and the decisions based upon them.

Building Models for Marketing Decisions Peter S.H. LeeFlang,Dick R. Wittink,Michel Wedel,Philippe A. Naert,2013-06-29 This book is about marketing models and the process of model building Our primary focus is on models that can be used by managers to support marketing decisions It has long been known that simple models usually outperform judgments in predicting outcomes in a wide variety of contexts For example models of judgments tend to provide better forecasts of the outcomes than the judgments themselves because the model eliminates the noise in judgments And since judgments never fully reflect the complexities of the many forces that influence outcomes it is easy to see why models of actual outcomes should be very attractive to marketing decision makers Thus appropriately constructed models can provide insights about structural relations between marketing variables Since models explicate the relations both the process of model building and the model that ultimately results can improve the quality of marketing decisions Managers often use rules of thumb for decisions For example a brand manager will have defined a specific set of alternative brands as the competitive set within a product category Usually this set is based on perceived similarities in brand characteristics advertising messages etc If a new marketing initiative occurs for one of the other brands the brand manager will have a strong inclination to react The reaction is partly based on the manager s desire to maintain some competitive parity in the marketing variables
